Plane Output Lags, Knudsen Asks 'War Basis'

Plants 30% Behind; Defense Aide Calls For End of Week-End Production 'Blackout'

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Dec. 13.—William S. Knudsen, production chief of the National Defense Advisory Commission, warned tonight that defense production thus far was "not satisfactory enough to warrant hopes that everything is all well."

Addressing 2,500 leaders at the closing session of the National Association of Manufacturers' Congress of American Industry, Knudsen revealed that aircraft output is lagging 30 per cent behind production schedules made last July.

Speaking straight from the shoulder and not attempting, he said, "to paint the lily in this talk," Knudsen, former president of the General Motors Corporation, declared the public is generally sold on defense, but "the defense job to my mind has not been sufficiently sold to industry and labor as yet."

"Blackout . . . of Production"

He raised the question whether the crisis might not lead to restoration of the six-day work week, to put "the defense job on a war basis, even if we are at peace."

"We have cut 20 per cent off our machine time," he said. "Can we afford to do this? Can't we stop this blackout, this lack of production from Friday to Monday and get more use of the equipment?"

He said aircraft production is "far from satisfactory," although "we ought to gain from now on," adding that the anticipated production figures for January 1, 1941, of 1,000 planes a month, would have to be scaled down by 30 per cent; this in contrast to the special message of President Roosevelt to Congress on May 16 of this year, asking for production of 50,000 warplanes a year.

Advanced Deliveries Urged

He urged manufacturers to "forget the delivery schedules and give us whatever you can in the way of advanced deliveries."

"I would not be surprised," he continued, "if they could be advanced 20 per cent. The first half of 1941 is crucial; after that we are sure to be under way, but if you gentlemen can help us better the deliveries so that we could be in swing the second quarter, you will have done your country an outstanding service of protection, both of its shores and its institutions.

"And those of you who are tooled up now, please give us more of your quantities, as much more as is humanly possible."

Guests at the dinner included some of the other members of the defense commission, Miss Harriet Elliott, director of the Consumer Protection Division; Leon Henderson, of the Price Stabilization Division, and Edward R. Stettinius, jr., Industrial Materials Division. Also present were Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps, and Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, chief of ordnance.

At the day session, Lewis W. Doug-

McReynolds Heads Table At Defense Meetings

William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, has sat at the head of the table at the last several meetings of the National Defense Advisory Commission, according to reports last night.

Since its appointment months ago, the six-member body has not had an appointed head. Naming of a chairman may follow closely on return of the President, according to the same reports.

British Drive Traps Fascists; Italy Orders Internal Cleanup; Greeks Capture Second Port

Fascists Detail 'Action Squads' To Take Care Of Defeatists

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Dec. 13.—The British advance in Egypt is frankly admitted here today, but Italian sources say that this is merely the beginning of the battle and the end will be very different. However, the British claim of having taken large numbers of prisoners and routed the Italians is denied. The initial impetus of an offensive always brings a temporary success, it is stated, but the final results are what counts.

Meanwhile, the internal campaign against defeatists and "bourgeoisie" is gaining pace in the newspapers and, perhaps, in reality, since Roberto Farinacci today divulges that when the secretary of the Fascist party convoked the commanders of the Rome "fighting squads" yesterday, he gave them orders to "react against those who are forgetting that Italy is at war."

Guido Baroni, in the Popolo di Roma, also has an important attack against "frequenters of bars, salons and banquets who listen to the British radio and talk about such and such a minister being sent as ambassador to a certain place and another man taking his post."

The communique says that the fighting in Egypt took place over a wide area yesterday.

"On the Cyrenaican frontier in the zone between Salum and Sidi Barrani and in the desert zone to the southeast the battle between our troops, which are fighting with great valor, and enemy motorized columns continued violently yesterday," it says. In combats on Monday, it is claimed, 18 British planes were shot down, while the Italians lost 12. On the Albanian front there was "no happening worthy of mention yesterday," according to the bulletin.

"Every offensive action, no matter who launches it, can always

Italy Warns Britain She May Get Angry

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—The Italian radio warned Britain in effect tonight: "Be careful or we'll get mad."

In a broadcast heard here by CBS, the Italian announcer said:

"There is one thing that British propaganda fails to take into account, and that is the peculiar temper of the Italians. The Italian is a light-hearted and easy-going fellow until he is aroused. Sometimes what he needs is just a little slap, then he stands up and fights to a finish, and the more blows the more dangerous he becomes. The British ought to remember this."

Hellenes Enter Porto Palermo; Led by Tanks Won From Foe

By Ben Ames.
United Press Staff Writer

Athens, Dec. 13.—Greek troops led by captured Italian tanks today seized the Albanian port of Palermo and swept on toward the bomb-shattered seaport of Valona, 30 miles northward, toward which Fascist forces were reported fleeing under terrific bombardment.

Empty Italian cargo ships were reported to have put into Valona under "almost constant" air bombings, presumably to evacuate the Italians there, after virtual bomb destruction of the seaport, second largest in Albania and supply base for the Fascist armies in lower Albania.

(The Greek radio, heard in Budapest, said a Greek column had reached the Adriatic coast north of Chimara and was "pushing forward after capturing Italian fortified positions," indicating that Chimara either had been captured or encircled after the taking of Porto Palermo five miles to the south.)

The capture of Porto Palermo gave the Greeks possession of a 30-mile stretch of Albania's seacoast northward from the Epirus frontier and marked an advance of 20 miles in eight days from conquered Porto Edda.

An official announcement early today said that in the 48 days of the Italo-Greek conflict the Greeks have captured 7,200 prisoners and "many hundreds of millions of drachmas worth of war supplies." (The Greek drachma is currently equal to about three-quarters of a cent.)

The prisoners were said by an official spokesman to include 200 officers.

War materials abandoned by the Italians in their retreat were said to include 120 cannon, 55 antitank and antiaircraft guns, 250 cars and trucks, 1,500 motorcycles, many light and heavy tanks and thousands of automatic rifles and machine guns.

Considering Truce

With the Italians swiftly surrendering southern Albanian territory, according to military dispatches, a captured Italian commander was quoted today as saying that the Italian high command in Tirana was considering the possibility of asking Greece for an armistice.

The capture of Porto Palermo was announced in an official communique, which told of a swift advance headed by Greek armored cars and captured Italian light tanks.

Greek military leaders said they doubted that the Italians could hold the town of Chimara, 4 miles beyond Porto Palermo, which is the major coastal objective of the Greeks.

Valona, second largest Albanian seaport, has been so badly shat-

Roosevelt and Windsor Confer About Better Site for U. S. Base

Duke and President Have Lunch Aboard Tuscaloosa and Talk for Three Hours; Ex-King Silent on Story He'll Be Envoy

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard U. S. S. Tuscaloosa, Eluthera Island, the Bahamas, Dec. 13 (By Radio).—President Roosevelt and the Duke of Windsor conferred for nearly three hours today aboard the Presidential flagship concerning United States defense outposts protecting the Panama Canal and the mainland of the Americas.

The Duke told newsmen that the people of the Bahamas looked with great favor on establishment of the bases and that "we are ready to do what the President wants when he gives the word."

The President disclosed at an informal press conference that plans for the establishment of a Bahamas base were being held in abeyance because of unfavorable anchorage and other conditions at Mayaguana Island, which he inspected yesterday.

He also has seen Little San Salvador, Long and Eleuthera Islands, but said none was entirely satisfactory for a base site and the problem required further study.

During the conference, the Tuscaloosa was anchored off this British island, about 70 miles from Nassau, the headquarters of the Duke as governor general of the Bahamas.

The duke arrived at 11:15 a. m. (Eastern standard time) from Miami in a four-engined naval patrol bomber. He was welcomed aboard the Tuscaloosa with full honors, and immediately went into conference.

The President and the duke discussed economic and defense conditions of the islands. Windsor said he expected to come to the United States early next year to study the CCC and probably would establish something similar for unskilled Bahama Negroes. He said he expected to lay the matter before his executive council.

Five of Duce's Divisions Caught In Bottleneck On Libyan Coast

BRITAIN'S victory in Egypt assumed proportions of overwhelming success with Italy's army routed and struggling against encirclement in its effort to retreat to Libya. Page 1.

THE DUCE'S soldiers tasted additional defeat from the valiant Greeks who occupied the Albanian port of Palermo and pressed on toward Valona. Noise of gunfire heard on the Yugoslavian coast indicated a possible naval or plane-warship battle in the Adriatic. Page 1.

Defeat Becoming Rout

By Philip S. Taylor
United Press Staff Writer

British Headquarters, Cairo, Saturday, Dec. 14.—Remnants of five Italian divisions which originally had numbered perhaps 75,000 men early today were reported attempting to escape through a "death trap" at the Egyptian-Libyan frontier after losing all their food and oil supplies to Britain's desert offensive.

Those who escaped through the bottleneck trap at the Egyptian border town of Salum, set ablaze by the guns of the British Mediterranean fleet, were being driven swiftly toward the Libyan coastal base of Tobruk, which is as deep in Libya as the high-water mark of the Fascist invasion—Sidi Barrani—is in Egypt.

The Italian flight back across the frontier under terrific hammering by land, sea and air was said to have become a disorganized rout.

The captured food and oil stocks, taken along with 25,000 to 30,000 prisoners, are being used by the swift-moving British forces, it was said.

Graziani's Power Broken

The rout of the five Italian divisions, and perhaps even more, was believed in military quarters early today to have broken the backbone of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's North African war machine.

An official communique described a harried flight of Graziani's "beaten army" across the western desert under blows by land, sea and air

Elephants Lead 'Far East Blitz'

Tokyo, Dec. 13 (INS).—French troops from Indo-China invaded Thailand today in a "Far East blitzkrieg" according to a Domei dispatch from Bangkok, Thailand capital.

This attacking force consisted of a mobile column of 24 French soldiers, two elephants, three horses and a bicycle, it was reported.

Thailand police fought off the invasion with one French soldier killed, according to Domei.

D. C. Selects To Start Army Life 'in Style'

Future selectees to be called to the colors from the District, Maryland and Virginia will begin Army life in Baltimore's expensive Fifth Regiment Armory—the acme of induction "style" compared to the old Fifth Marine Reserve headquarters formerly used for this purpose.

Third Corps Area officials decided to induct all citizen-soldiers from Washington in the block-long Baltimore structure and discarded the outmoded building at 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest, for reasons of "economy and efficiency."

Several hundreds of dollars' worth of repairs to the Marine headquarters would have been necessary to make it adequate for service, it was said.

Ex-Sailor Catches New York Woman In 3-Story Fall

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—A big former seaman—six feet three inches tall and 227 pounds—saw a woman dangling from a third-floor window sill today and thereupon hurdled a fence and poised himself under the window in time to catch her in his arms as she fell.

Police said the woman, Mrs. Dorothy Guzzi, 22, thus avoided all but trivial injuries, while the rescuer, Conrad C. Miller, 42, who said he was former heavyweight boxing champion of the United States Navy, complained only of a sore shoulder.

Polluted Mains In Rochester Peril 300,000

Typhoid Vaccine Rushed; Citizens Drink Boiled Water

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Typhoid fever immunization of Rochester's 300,000 inhabitants commenced today as New York's third largest city sought to ward off a disease outbreak threatened by the accidental pouring of sewage-contaminated drinking water into its mains.

The State Health Department rushed sufficient typhoid vaccine here from Albany, 200 miles away, to give the first of three treatments necessary to immunize 46,000 persons. More was to be supplied.

Only 400 Seek Vaccine

Fewer than 400 residents sought the vaccine at the city health bureau by midafternoon. The city, meanwhile, continued to boil all tap water which was discovered laden with germs yesterday after a workman inadvertently let untreated Genesee River water into the pipes.

Harold W. Leahy, health bureau chemist, who reported tests of water samples taken yesterday showed "gross pollution" and "definite contamination with sewage," said samples taken this morning after the mains had been heavily chlorinated revealed the "chlorine showing up."

He cautioned, however, against using unboiled water until the purifying gas had done its work and the water is proved safe.

Deserted, Ill, Mother of Twins Faces Christmas With Despair

By Lucia Giddens
Post Staff Writer

A woman deserted by her husband and recovering from a serious illness despairs this Christmas time of being able to take even everyday care of her little twin girls.

A young father, 20-years-old, can hold only a meager part-time job—not enough to provide for his wife and two children—until his health is improved at a clinic.

Contributions to The Post's Neediest Families Fund will help to keep these and 48 other families from suffering, worry and want, until they can regain a grip on their own problems.

Among those who responded to such need yesterday were:

An 87-year-old woman who in shaky handwriting penned a note signed "A Well Wisher" and sent a check for $5 to help a little homeless girl and her mother in Family No. 27.

Far From Home

The remains of the Marquess of Lothian, British Aambassador who died Thursday morning, will repose in a vault at Arlington National Cemetery for an indefinite period, it was announced late yesterday at the State Department.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Washington Cathedral, Massachusetts and Wisconsin Avenues Northwest.

An Army caisson bearing Lord Lothian's body will leave the British Embassy for the cathedral at 2 p. m., escorted by a squadron of Fort Myer cavalry.

Seats will be reserved in the cathedral for American and British officials, for members of the diplomatic corps, and for personal friends of the Ambassador.

Lord Lothian was a member of the Christian Science Church, but it was stated at the British Embassy last night that the service would be the ordinary Anglican service for the dead.

Following the service at the Cathedral, a private cremation service will be held at Fort Lincoln

Italian Defeat A Panic, Rout, Witness Says

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard a British Destroyer off Egypt and Libya, Dec. 13.—From sea and land, I have seen glimpses of the panic and the rout of the sand-whipped and disillusioned Italian army in Egypt, a rout that now seems comparable only to Caporetto and Guadalajara.

Scores of shells of from 6 to 15 inches poured from the sea into the ranks of the Italians on both sides of the Egyptian-Libyan border, first tore apart all organization of an attempt to reinforce the trapped troops of the advance.

Sweeping, then, within half a mile of the Libyan port of Bardia, the British fleet pumped one-ton high-explosive shells ashore. They started huge fires, and their explo-

Nazis Seize Second American Woman in Occupied France

German authorities in occupied France have taken a second American woman into custody, the State Department revealed here last night. She is Mrs. Eita Kahn Shiber, formerly of New York, who had been residing in Paris for the last three years.

A brother of Mrs. Shiber, Chester A. Kahn, whom the Associated Press reached in Syracuse, N. Y., last night, said a State Department notification gave him the first information he had received of his sister in four months.

Kahn said he had not known Mrs. Shiber's whereabouts, and the State Department's notification did not tell him exactly where she was being held. The State Department, which said its information came through diplomatic channels, told Kahn the "charges against her had not been ascertained" and that the department, through the embassy in Paris, is "making every effort to be of assistance to her."

Mrs. Shiber, Kahn said, is 62. She is the widow of William Shiber, an editor of the old New York Journal. In her last letter to him, August 10, she told her brother she had joined the refugee hordes leaving Paris before the Germans arrived, and then had returned to the city two weeks after it was occupied.

The State Department said it was advised by the embassy at Paris of Mrs. Shiber's detention December 6. But the exact date of the incident was not given.

The detention of Mrs. Elizabeth Deegan, a clerk of the embassy, was announced in The Post December 6. It was understood she had been accused of helping British officers escape from occupied France. Last night State Department officials said they had no word of her release.

THE RIDDLE OF THE SILVER SHAMROCK

WHO KILLED the mysterious peddler over whose body the postmistress stumbled in the woods? What became of the rifle with the silver shamrock plate set on the stock? What were Mary Morningstar's heel prints doing near the body? Those were the questions that set Martha Berry's mind to buzzing until they almost drove it from the older question, "Why in the world did Shane Fortune ever marry Nesta Cramer?" Yet it was the answer to this which held the riddle of the silver shamrock.

Building 50,000 planes turned out to be quite an assignment. What about training the pilots to fly those planes? The Post's Eddie Folliard investigated the CAA program and discovered that what was planned to be a boost for civilian flying is turning out to be at least part of the answer for the Army and Navy—and may solve the problem of what to do with increased airplane production when peace finally comes. If you've worried about our preparedness read Folliard's story.

London to Divert Food Ships to Keep Near East Supplied

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 13.—The ships which have been bringing food to this country will be diverted to take food, guns, munitions and supplies to the Middle East, said the minister of food, Lord Woolton, speaking at the inauguration of a new food educational campaign to "teach the nation to live hard," at Portsmouth yesterday.

Lord Woolton also warned that hoarders would be dealt with remorselessly and ruthlessly.

The Weather Man Protects London

By James MacDonald
Copyright by New York Times

London, Saturday, Dec. 14.—Bomb-scarred London enjoyed another let-up in German raids this morning and last night.

The lull was due, in the belief of unofficial observers, to bad flying weather.

How other parts of the country fared during the night was not revealed in the early reports which only said that enemy planes were believed to be over two east-Anglian towns last night.

London had an air raid alarm later than usual last night, but it lasted less than an hour, during which air raiders were over one nearby county but failed to reach the metropolis.

Friday-the-thirteenth was a good luck day for Britain so far as air raids were concerned. Not a single bomb was dropped anywhere in Britain throughout the daylight period.

Resuming their tactic of concentrating on one city at a time, the Germans picked out the industrial area of Sheffield for a heavy attack yesterday morning and Thursday night, but what industrial damage, if any, they did was not revealed. Authorities said that considering the length and severity of the attack, the number of casualties was not high.

Destruction in the Sheffield district was on a big scale, but the precise extent of the damage was not given.

After spending many hours in shelters during the night, Sheffield residents awoke yesterday morning to find many changes in their city. Movie theaters, stores and houses had been destroyed. Some churches received direct hits or were damaged by a blast. Several streets were blocked by wrecked streetcars and the piled debris of damaged buildings. Many houses were rendered entirely uninhabitable.

A delayed-action bomb exploded in a London district yesterday, killing several persons, including a police inspector, injuring others, wrecking a garage and damaging nearby shops and houses.

Unfavorable weather prevented Royal Air Force bombers from carrying out raids on points in Germany Friday morning and Thursday night.

Greeks Capture Porto Palermo

tered by "almost continuous" Greek and British air bombings that the Italian command has been forced to abandon it as a debarkation port for troop reinforcements and supplies, it was stated reliably.

British and Greek planes swept ahead of today's advance, disorganizing the Italian retreat in the vicinity of Chimara.

(Reports from Struga, on the Yugoslav frontier, said the Greeks had pressed on to the outskirts of Chimara, taken the village of Borci, and still were pushing on.

(It also was reported from Struga that the Italians had withdrawn their main forces from Chimara, leaving only a battalion with five tanks to protect their retreat. In the flight from Borcio an Italian officer, 90 soldiers, a field gun and 4 machine guns were reported captured.)

(Heavy cannonading indicating that British planes might be attacking Italian transports en route to San Giovanni de Medua, northernmost port of Albania, was reported from the Yugoslav port of Dubrovnik and Yugoslav military planes took off to investigate, reporting an oil patch on the surface which might indicate that an Italian ship was sunk.

(The Italians were said to be using San Giovanni de Medua as their major supply port in Albania now as result of the heavy bombings of Durazzo and Valona.)

While the Greek coastal force was storming into Porto Palermo an inland column working in close conjunction with it was reported driving the Italians back from Tepelini, about 27 miles from Valona along the Upper Viosa Valley, and heavy fighting was reported from around both Tepelini and Klisura.

Bitter Battle in North

Bitolj, Yugoslavia (near the Albanian Frontier), Dec. 13 (AP).—The Greeks lashed out against the Italians with a big push along the entire northern Albania front today and the bloodiest fighting of the war raged in that sector, advices from the front said tonight.

The battle area was declared strewn with the dead of both sides as opposing infantrymen fought hand-to-hand, with the Greeks driving the Fascists deeper into the snow-capped mountains.

The fighting ranged over a wide arc from west of muskopole to Uduniste, on Lake Ochrida. Backing up the Greek infantry charges, Greek artillery pounded the Italians with a day-long bombardment. The Italians themselves replied with heavy artillery fire and Mussolini's infantry put up the stiffest resistance yet witnessed in the north.

The Greeks apparently were attempting to make quick work of their drives against Elbasan, 20 miles south of Tirana, Albanian capital, and Berat, some 30 miles farther to the southeast, to fulfill their battle cry of "Tirana by Christmas."

2 German Ships Sunk

London, Dec. 13 (AP).—The British submarine Sunfish has sunk a German supply ship of about 4,000 tons off the Norwegian coast, the admiralty announced today.

The submarine also was reported to have hit and damaged a German oil tanker of about the same tonnage.

The admiralty said that the ship was deeply laden and it is probable that she was carrying a large cargo of ore to Germany.

Duncan Mentioned in London As Likely Successor to Lothian

Sir Andrew's Name Takes Precedence Over Anthony Eden's

By William J. Humphreys
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 13.—Speculation centered tonight upon Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, a former corporation lawyer and industrialist and now British minister of supply, as a probable successor to the late Lord Lothian as Ambassador to the United States.

In one quarter it was even suggested that he might be named within a few days.

War Minister Anthony Eden had been much talked of earlier, but his name receded from private discussions. It was considered that the Washington post is not now essentially diplomatic—since it is felt by some here that the United States and Britain see more or less eye to eye on the war—but one requiring mainly a man skilled in business and finance.

He Fills the Bill

In this respect Sir Andrew fills the bill. He has spent most of an adult lifetime in big business; has been a director of the Bank of England and chairman of the executive committee of the British Iron and Steel Federation, among other posts.

In the government of Prime Minister Andrew Bonar Law his appointment as coal controller caused much criticism from labor members of Commons. That was in 1919, and the next year he returned to the shipbuilding federation as its vice president and spokesman.

Many of the biggest concerns in the British Isles have been his clients. He is a former chairman of the British Board of Trade.

Sir Andrew, who is 56, was born in Scotland. He is married and had two sons, one of whom was killed at Dunkerque.

Sir Andrew, who has headed many government commissions, entered the cabinet when Winston Churchill became prime minister.

In 1927, as chairman of the central electricity board, he reorganized utilities throughout the British Isles, and he became chairman of the British Iron and Steel Federation upon its reorganization in 1934.

Knows Britains' Needs

Earlier, he headed a royal commission which investigated the coal industry in Nova Scotia, and another which considered the grievances of the eastern maritime Provinces of Canada.

Among other business posts, he has held a directorship of Imperial Chemical Industries.

Sir Andrew, a brawny and square-faced man, knows Britain's material war needs inside out. He is recognized in Commons for his knowledge of commerce and economics generally, both on the export and home fronts.

SIR ANDREW DUNCAN.

London, Dec. 13.—King George IV sent a message of thanks today in response to President Roosevelt's cable of sympathy on the death of the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian.

Another tribute to Lord Lothian was paid by Jan Masaryk. "During my recent visit to America I saw how great and successful his work was," the Czechoslovakian foreign minister said. "All the friends of British and American brotherly cooperation will miss him very much."

Apparently Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax is becoming more and more of a possibility to succeed Lord Lothian. It is reported that Halifax has been approached and is pondering his decision; it is also reported that War Secretary Anthony Eden, another favored candidate, has definitely said he does not want the job.

Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production, visited the King today. Since Lord Beaverbrook has been mentioned for the Washington post the visit set tongues wagging.

London, Dec. 13 (AP).—Friends of Viscount Cranborne, dominions secretary, were reported tonight to have submitted his name to Prime Minister Churchill with a recommendation that he be appointed Ambassador to the United States.

Lord Cranborne appeared to be heading the list of candidates from which Churchill will select a successor to the late Marquess of Lothian.

and shattering attacks deep into Libya that set afire parts of the Fascist bases at Tobruk, 70 miles across the border, and at Bardia.

British casualties were described as "very light" and wounded British soldiers returning to the rear asserted that neither the Italian Blackshirts—Benito Mussolini's pride—nor the native Libyans put up a fight.

That, they said, explained the large number of prisoners, which already includes five generals. Three captured generals were brought to Cairo by plane yesterday.

In the wake of the Italian flight British infantry mopped up a 400 to 500 square mile desert battlefield, gathering vast amounts of valuable materials, including Italian mechanized equipment.

British pilos described their constant bombing assaults in which R. A. F. squadrons have carried out 67 attacks behind the Italian lines in the past 72 hours. They reported "great fires" blazing at Salum and other bombed towns and bases and said long columns of Italian mechanized vehicles were attempting to reach Tobruk.

Drive a "Complete Surprise"

One of the captured Italian military leaders, Chief of Staff Col. Guisfreda, was quoted here as telling British officers:

"Your action was brilliantly conceived and even more brilliantly executed . . . We were taken completely by surprise."

An official communique yesterday told of the capture of "several thousand" more Italians, including two more generals, and it was understood that the total number of prisoners now stood between 25,000 and 30,000 men.

The British mechanized spearhead was reported almost at the Libyan border, thereby virtually wiping out Italy's 75-mile-deep invasion of western Egypt.

Italian communications were said here to have been completely "demoralized," making it impossible for the Fascists to reorganize their forces for counterattacks or escape being driven into the bottleneck near Salum.

Troops and mechanized transport forces were heavily attacked and British bombs blasted at 12 or more Italian airdromes during the past 24 hours, it was stated in communiques.

British military leaders believed that thousands of Fascist troops would be trapped in the Salum bottleneck under day and night attacks by Britain's land, sea and air forces.

The bottleneck is a narrow gorge between Salum on the Egyptian side of the border and Bardia, the Italian base just over the frontier.

The British mechanized units followed by infantry pressed the retreating Italians toward the bottleneck along the coast highway, only motor road to Libya, while guns of the British Mediterranean fleet constantly blasted at the Italian line.

(In London, although officials spoke cautiously, there was speculation that Benito Mussolini might be forced to call out his fleet in a final desperate effort to stem a threatened disaster.

(The London Daily Express suggested even that Adolf Hitler might suddenly order an attempt to invade Great Britain in hope of bringing the war to a quick end, even at the cost of 500,000 German troops, because "Hitler must act quickly if he is to keep Mussolini at the head of Italy and not find himself attacking an enemy much better equipped than himself.")

Cemetery, Bladensburg Road and the District line.

Then on Monday at noon the ashes of the Ambassador will be placed in a vault at Arlington National Cemetery. This ceremony will be accompanied by full military honors, which includes the sounding of Taps and three volleys from a firing squad.

The vault is located under the mast of the U. S. S. Maine, and a part of the bell taken from that ill-fated warship hangs on the door.

The State Department announcement said that Lord Lothian's ashes would remain in the vault "for an indefinite period until arrangements can be made for final disposition."

Robert R. Dye, superintendent of Arlington National Cemetery, told The Post last night that the bodies of at least two other foreign ambassadors had reposed temporarily in the vault under the Maine mast. However, he was unable to recall their names. The bodies of several other foreigners, he said, also had been cared for there temporarily, including that of the son of a mayor of Rome.

The funeral arrangements for Lord Lothian were completed by State Department and British Embassy officials after a cablegram had been received earlier in the day from the Ambassador's three sisters in the British Isles.

The United States Government has not yet formally offered the British government a cruiser to take Lord Lothian's remains back to England. Whether such an offer will be made probably will be determined when President Roosevelt returns from his Caribbean cruise.

Berlin's Innuendo

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—The Berlin radio broadcast today the following comment on the death of Lord Lothian:

"It is understood that certain very interesting informations have reached Berlin in regards to this event.

"Their contents are not revealed because, as it is said, the informations must first be examined.

"It is said only in Berlin that Lord Lothian's death, if it was a natural one, must certainly not have been an easy one because Englishmen who, like him, knew the present situation of his country and who loved his country, could not die peacefully."

Embassy Expresses Gratitude

The staff of the British Embassy, through the Charge d'Affaires, last night acknowledged "with sincere gratitude" the expressions of sympathy which have reached them since Lord Lothian's death.

"Owing to the number of messages," said their brief statement, "immediate personal acknowledgment is unavoidably delayed, but will be made as soon as possible."

U. S. Destroyer Officer Tells Rhein Capture

Overtaken by Dutch In Neutrality Zone, Ship Is Sunk by British

By the Associated Press

Key West, Fla., Dec. 13.—A United States naval officer said today that shots fired broadside into the German tanker Rhein by the British cruiser Caradoc sank the tanker after she had been burning for more than 15 hours.

He was aboard the destroyer MacLeish of the Key West Neutrality Patrol. Officers and crew of the destroyer witnessed the capture of the tanker and the attempted scuttling by her German crew.

Here is his account:

"The Rhein was fired by her crew about 1:30 a. m., Wednesday well within the American neutrality zone.

"When the MacLeish arrived at the scene the Dutch training ship Van Klingsbergen, which is slightly larger than a destroyer, was in close pursuit of the tanker.

"Suddenly flames shot from forward and stern and the German ship was a blazing inferno. Life boats were lowered and the crew abandoned ship.

"The Dutch crew did not board the Rhein until after she had been fired. They did not remain aboard long as they realized that it was impossible to extinguish the fire."

"The crewmen of the Rhein were removed from their lifeboats by Dutch sailors and taken aboard the Van Kingsbergen. Later they were transferred to the British cruiser Caradoc. The Caradoc did not arrive until the tanker was aflame.

"Lifeboats abandoned by the Germans were destroyed by members of the MacLeish's crew because of their peril to navigation.

"United States destroyers followed the Rhein and the German ship Idarwald from the time they left Tampico, Mexico, in an unsuccessful attempt to run the British blockade."

British Ship Forfar Sunk

London, Dec. 13 (AP).—The British armed merchant cruiser Forfar has been torpedoed and sunk, an official admiralty communique said tonight.

[Survivors of the British armed merchant cruiser Forfar claimed that their guns sank an attacking U-boat before their own vessel finally went to the bottom in the north Atlantic, the United Press reported.]

Biggest Norse Liner Goes Down

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Shipping circles said today the 18,673-ton passenger liner Oslofjord, Norway's largest and finest ship, struck a mine and sank two days ago off Newcastle in the British Isles.

Chartered by England after seeking refuge here from the war, the Oslofjord sailed secretly last October 26 for Halifax, where she reportedly picked up Canadian aviators for England.

She was reported to have landed the aviators and to have started back to Canada when she struck the mine.

Freighter Orari Torpedoed

U. S. Planes Equal to Any, Says Gen. Brett

Acting Air Chief Admits Obsolete Craft Was Exported

Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, acting chief of Air Corps, yesterday defended American-built warplanes against charges that craft sent to Great Britain have proved inferior to German and British combat ships and are used only for training.

"The War Department," he declared, "has not only developed but is procuring equipment which, from all information that can be secured from our observers in Europe, is equal or superior to that now employed abroad."

American planes now in England, Gen. Brett admitted by implication, may well be inferior to British Spitfires and German Messerschmidts, as all were obsolete or obsolescent when released by this Nation for export.

He pointed out that prior to last March, Army and Navy policy precluded the export of any but obsolescent war material, and planes were purchased by the British and French with this understanding.

Some 93 A-17 planes belonging to the Army were exported, Brett said, after the Air Corps made it clear to the Allied Purchasing Mission that they were "completely obsolete for fighting purposes." They were used for training.

Similarly, the DB-7 Douglas bomber, which had been found not acceptable by the American Army in a competition in 1939, was purchased by the Allies "in considerable quantities," the Air Corps chief said. The Martin-167 bomber, likewise unacceptable to us, was ordered in large quantities, and the Curtiss P-36 was considered obsolescent when ordered by the French.

Policy Changed

When the policy was changed last March to permit foreign purchasers to order planes whenever an improved model of the released type was available for procurement by the United States, and the Curtiss P-40 was released Gen. Brett declared, there had been no severe air fighting between the opposing air forces.

"Some of these early models were purchased by the British, and it is understood that after the addition of two machine guns and leakproof tanks and limited improvised armor, they were sent to England," he said. "Whether any of these planes have been used in combat is unknown.

"When the P-40 was released to Britain, although a modern plane, it was regarded as obsolescent by the War Department, which was placing in production an improved model known as the P140D which has greatly increased fire power, leakproof tanks and protective armor. These plans are now being manufactured for both the United States and Great Britain.

"Close relationship has existed between the technical members of the British Purchasing Commission and our War Department. Every advantage has been taken of the lessons learned during the war and the incorporation of new features of design and equipment has been made as rapidly as possible in all the equipment now under production. But the development and production of airplanes is a lengthy process and cannot be interrupted for each new improvement if necessary numbers are to be obtained."

Navy Sends Submarine Division And 12 Bombers to Philippines

By the United Press

Honolulu, Dec. 13.—Twelve naval patrol bombers and a division of submarines which left Honolulu under strict official secrecy are en route to the Philippine Islands, it was revealed today.

The bombers took off from here last Monday. Normal arrival time there would be today, but Navy officers explained the flight had been scheduled in unusually "easy stages."

The planes, it was understood, were the latest type of Consolidated patrol bombers, with twin engines of 1,500 horsepower each.

A submarine division usually is made up of six craft.

The bomber flight schedule called for stops at Midway, Wake and Guam Islands en route to Manila. They were to have rested last night at Guam before hopping for Manila.

The submarines have been en route to the Philippines since December 7, it was learned.

It was understood Navy officials expected the planes and submarines to arrive simultaneously at Manila.

The Navy branded as "pure guesswork" reports here that the bombers would be turned over to the British air station at Singapore.

The main battle fleet is at sea off Lahaina Roads on "routine maneuvers" and is expected at Pearl Harbor base soon for the Christmas holidays.

Both the Army and Navy have been sending reinforcements to the Philippines, in small groups, for several weeks.

Two explanations have been offered for the secrecy which has surrounded the American movements:

1. That the United States quietly is massing enough strength in Manila and adjacent areas to ward off any Japanese attack which might result if a part of the United States Asiatic Fleet is transferred to Britain's Singapore base. It is known that Britain has offered the Singapore base to the American armed forces for use whenever desired.

2. That the United States is preparing for an extensive naval demonstration in East Asia as part of a program designed to convince Japan that this country means business when it asserts its hope for a preservation of the status quo in East Asia and is willing to back up its financial and economic assistance to nationalist China with force if necessary.

Atlantic Search For Raider Futile, Briton Reports

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 13 (AP). An extensive British search for the unidentified German raider which damaged the British armed merchant cruiser Carnarvon Castle off the Brazilian coast last week has been futile, Commodore Frank Pegram, commander of the South Atlantic squadron, said today.

"Had we located the raider, there would not be a raider any more," Pegram said.

Some naval men believe at least four raiders are operating in the South Atlantic.

Hitler Meeting With Duce Seen in Offing

Berlin Mum on Rumors; Ribbentrop, Hitler Leave Capital

By C. Brooks Peters
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Dec. 13.—Both Hitler and his Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, have departed from the Reich's capital for what is believed will be a lengthy week-end. Relative to rumors abroad alleging that Chancellor Hitler soon will meet the Duce, it was said "nothing at all is known here."

In view of the repeated reverses which the Italian armed forces have been suffering in Albania and North Africa, the possibility of such a visit is obvious.

The press speculates on the objective of the visit of the North Ireland Prime Minister, John Andrews, to London. The opinion appears to prevail here, judging from these press dispatches, that some deal may be in progress whereby the British will secure the use of Irish west coast ports in exchange for concessions to the De Valera government in relation to Ulster.

The chief topic of discussion, however, continues to be what are termed concentrated efforts of British propaganda to woo the military support of the United States. And a highly authoritative article in the Axis publication "Berlin-Rome-Tokyo" captioned "between yesterday and tomorrow," asserts that so far as the outcome of the war is concerned whatever support the United States may extend to the British is not important.

"What, for France, until her horrible awakening, was the myth of the Marne, that is what today is the myth of the parallel between 1917 and 1941, for England. But the English, too, should know that history does not repeat itself and they should today also know that Germany is not only invincible but already has victory firmly in her hand."

Both British and Nazis Remember Graf Spee

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 13 (AP).—British held victory parties today on the first anniversary of the battle between the German pocket battleship Graf Spee and British cruisers.

Germans held memorial services for Graf Spee crewmen killed in the battle who are buried here. The battleship was scuttled by her crew after the battle.

Argentina, Uruguay Map Defense Plans

Neighbor Nations May Be Invited to Join in Discussions

By the Associated Press

Colonia, Uruguay, Dec. 13.—Foreign Ministers Alberto Guani of Uruguay and Julio Roca of Argentina, conferring here on mutual defense problems, announced tonight that they were considering inviting Brazil, Chile, Bolivia and Paraguay to participate in the discussions.

The first official announcement of the two-day conversations between the foreign ministers said "the question of continental defense" as well as "problems related to security of the River Plata" were reviewed.

It was understood Argentina had no objections to continued Uruguayan-United States defense conversations, but reserved the right to raise objections on any proposals threatening domination of the vital River Plata between the two countries.

The statement also revealed that Argentina and Uruguay hoped to reach a new treaty calling for increased trade—considered important because of Argentina's past coldness toward intensified inter-American trade.

Roca had planned to return to Buenos Aires tonight, but postponed his departure until Sunday to allow for another day of conversations with Guani.

Guani and Roca, conferring at the estate of a mutual friend here, discussed the whole question of defense plans, including the projected Uruguayan-United States collaboration, which have stirred up a crisis in the Government of President Alfredo Baldomir of Uruguay.

Baldomir Seeks Peace

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 13 (AP).—Three Cabinet members who resigned in protest against a projected policy of collaborating with the United States in the construction of bases for hemisphere defense were summoned to a conference by President Alfredo Baldomir today in an effort to heal quickly the breach in the government.

Baldomir said he hoped such a conference would cause them to reconsider their resignations, probably with assurances that Uruguay's participation in any continental defense plan would not create a threat of United States control over the River Plata's approaches.

The three ministers—all members of the Herrerista (minority) Party—were Minister of Public Works Juan Jose Arteaga, Minister of Industries Gervasio Posadas Belgrano and Minister of Public Education Abalcazar Garcia.

Fascists to Make War on Defeatists

boast an inevitable initial success," writes the Tribuna. "This comes from the aggressive drive, from the power of the means used and their concentration on a determined point of the battlefront. But this never decided any battle. One must wait and see what happens afterward."

Once again the newspapers are full of warnings that the war has entered a very difficult stage and Italy has a hard task ahead. The Lavoro Fascist openly states that the first six months of the war for Italy have been deceptively easy.

Virginio Gayda, in the Giornale d'Italia, strikes a slightly different and more hopeful note today, for he considers the Egyptian offensive as proof that Grieta Britain is making her last desperate gamble. According to him, Britain is about to be overwhelmed by the German air attack, the blockade and other developments. The offensive, he says, is Britain's "supreme effort."

Truce Report Denied

Rome, Dec. 13.—Usually well-informed persons predicted tonight that the Italian armies would defend their lines in both Libya and Albania for the rest of the winter.

On the Albanian front, the high command said merely: "Nothing worthy of special report; small attacks of local character repelled." A rumor supposed to have originated in Athens concerning a possible Greek-Italian armistice was discredited in authoritative circles; Fascists said Mussolini's announced determination to "break the back of Greece," whether it takes 2 months or 12, precluded any truce.

tour of Caribbean defense sites, including those at Jamaica, St. Lucia, Antigua and the Bahamas, the President told reporters that obviously the further you kept from the American Continent a potential attack against it, the safer it would be.

That meant, he said, that we wanted to be as far out as we could be. Newfoundland, he said, was as far as we could go in the north, and Bermuda as far off the coast as we could go. With no island between Bermuda and Puerto Rico, he said, the Bahamas was the next best thing and would serve also as a stepping stone for the maintenance of the southern end of the outer defense line in the Windward and Leeward Islands in case of attack.

The President said there would be no such thing as a Gibraltar and the United States must have many bases because naval war in these waters would be more mobile than in such a strait as Gibraltar.

If Puerto Rico were fortified all around and had 1,000,000 men defending it, the attacking force could go around it, the President said. He added that he knew Newfoundland and Trinidad waters well but wanted to see St. Lucia and Antigua because he had never been close inshore there.

Summing up his inspections, the President likened the sites to stepping stones good for three things, namely, sea planes, land planes and ships, with the ships providing supplies and maintenance.

Jamaica, inside the outer defense line, he called a stepping stone to the Panama Canal, Central America and Colombia. He said the harbor was excellent but needed some dredging and could be made submarine-proof by nets.

St. Lucia had good anchorage and a lee for smaller ships and was apparently satisfactory in every way, he said, for sea and land planes.

Antigua was very good for both types of planes, but not so good for ships must anchor on the beach or means satisfactory, he said, because ships mus anchor on the beach or in 1,000 fathoms.

Concerning his discussion of the Bahamas with the duke, the President said the economics of the islands fitted into the economics of the American islands.

Mr. Roosevelt said he discussed economics also with the governors of Jamaica and Antigua, telling the Jamaican governor that Puerto Ricans could eat their rice, and the Antigua governor that a dairy industry could be established to serve the United States officers and men based there.

After his return to Miami the duke talked a few minutes with reporters, then hurried off to Miami Beach to join his wife at St. Francis Hospital.

Much improved, the duchess took an automobile ride today and visited a landscape gardener.

The duke said they would remain in Miami at least over the week-end, perhaps moving from the hospital tomorrow to a Coral Gables hotel.

The Tuscaloosa will reach Charleston sometime in the afternoon and the President will board a train immediately and head for Warm Springs, Ga., where he will make a brief visit to the Infantile Paralysis Foundation. It is expected Mr. Roosevelt will be back in Washington Monday.

N. A. M. Assails St. Lawrence Waterway Plan

Fears Project Would Obstruct Defense Program

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—The National Association of Manufacturers today adopted a resolution opposing the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway and power project on the grounds that it would be uneconomical in times of peace and would obstruct the national defense program.

Its completion would require at least eight years, the resolution said, and could be of no value in the present emergency. On the contrary, it was added, the project would use funds, labor and materials needed for Army and Navy equipment.

No need for development of power in the region exists, the resolution said, and the power project would be "a wasteful duplication of existing economical and efficient utilities."

In another resolution, the N. A. M. condemned "extra-legal methods of enforcement of Federal law."

Called Experimental, Ambiguous

The resolution stated that many Federal statutes regulating business activity, while containing penalties as drastic as any found in criminal law, are experimental, ambiguous, and uncertain in the obligations imposed on management.

The resolution charged that certain Government agencies have resorted to extra-legal methods in the enforcement of the statutes.

Another resolution set forth that any alteration of the Nation's transportation system necessitated by the defense program should be made of harmony with the "principles of private enterprise."

The Congress also recommended that at the present time there should be "no basic changes" in the Social Security program.

Urge Economic Program

Another resolution declared steps should be taken to meet international economic competition with the return of peace.

Steps advocated were:

To restore to the United States its constitutional control over foreign commerce and the protection of American producers.

To protect American industry, labor and agriculture from destructive foreign competition.

To protect all the products of the labor and the farms of America from competitive foreign products.

U. S. Armored Unit Speeds 115 Miles In Record Time

Panama City, Fla., Dec. 13 (AP).—The second armored division—10,000 men and 2,500 vehicles—breezed into Panama City today on the second phase of the Army's First Field expedition with a United States version of a panzer division.

The division rolled the second 115 miles of the trip out of Fort Benning in record-breaking time. The column left Abbeville, Ala., at 7 a. m. (CET) and arrived here before noon.

Tanks that weigh 25,000 pounds whizzed across bridges built to carry 14,000 pounds, and whipped up speeds above 40 miles an hour on the good highways.

Riding in columns spaced no more than 25 yards apart, the fast-moving tanks kept their drivers constantly jiggling control levers but by the time the division reached here the score was only one collision, and that a gentle one.

Officers, already elated by yesterday's performance in bringing the division out of Fort Benning for the first time since it was organized, described the second leg of the trip as even better than expected.

Roosevelt Vote Margin Least Since 1916

27,241,939 Cast For Him; Willkie Total Sets Record for G.O.P.

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt polled 27,241,939 votes to win the first third term in the Nation's history last November 5, when a new record of 49,808,624 ballots were cast.

Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican candidate, received 22,327,226.

Final official figures from 46 States and unofficial totals from Nebraska and Rhode Island, as compiled by the Associated Press, show the Chief Executive's plurality of 4,914,713 was the smallest of any candidate since 1916 when Woodrow Wilson won reelection over Charles E. Hughes by 591,385.

His percentage of the total vote—54.7—also was the smallest of any winner since 1916. Wilson that year polled 49.2 per cent; Hughes, 46.0; others, 4.7. Roosevelt's 1936 percentage was 60.8. In 1932 it was 57.3.

Willkie's percentage this year was 44.8; others, 0.5.

Though loosing, Willkie hung up a record popular vote for Republicans, exceeding by 935,036 Herbert Hoover's previous high mark of 21,392,190 in defeating Alfred E. Smith in 1928.

Minor parties as a group—with 239,458—polled fewer votes this year than in any election since 1924, excluding so-called "third" parties.

Here's the way they fared last November:

Norman Thomas (Soc.)	116,796
Roger W. Babson (Pro.)	58,600
Earl R. Browder (Com.)	48,789
John W. Aiken (So.-Labor)	14,861
Others	413

Record Popular Vote

The total popular vote exceeded by 4,161,507 the previous record of 45,647,117 in 1936 and was within one-fifth of 1 per cent of the 49,719,200 estimate of the probable vote made on October 24 by the Associated Press.

Although his plurality was the smallest in 24 years, Roosevelt's electoral college victory was the third largest since the Nation grew up into 48 States. His electoral vote of 449 to 82 for Willkie was exceeded only by Roosevelt's own 523-to-8 margin over Alf M. Landon in 1936 and his 472-to-59 victory over Hoover in 1932. Prior to 1932, Hoover held the electoral vote record, 444 to 87, over Alfred E. Smith in 1928.

Presidential electors will meet Monday in the 48 States to go through the formality of casting their votes. Congress will count their votes in a joint session January 6.

Roosevelt had pluralities this year in all but ten States. Willkie carried Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, and Vermont. This was eight more than Landon carried four years ago.

Eight States gave the Chief Executive more than 1,000,000 votes each—California, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania. All of these, except Massachusetts and New Jersey, also gave Willkie more than 1,000,000 each.

Fewer Democratic votes were cast this year than in 1936 in 24 States, including New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio. The list included seven of the ten States Willkie won. In Maine, Michigan and Vermont, where Willkie won the electoral vote, the Democratic popular vote gained in numbers.

G. O. P. Gains Widespread

States in which the Democratic percentage of the total vote in the State gained over 1936 were: Delaware, 54.7 against 54.6; Maine, 48.8 against 41.5; Massachusetts 53.1 against 51.3; New Hampshire, 53.2 against 49.7; North Carolina 74.0 against 73.4; Vermont, 44.9 against 43.2.

Mississippi gave Roosevelt the highest percentage of the total vote in any State—95.7. South Carolina was close behind with 95.6.

The Republican percentage gained over 1936 in all States except Maine, where it was 51.1 this year against 55.5 four years ago; New Hampshire, 46.8 against 49.0; North Carolina, 26.0 against 26.6; Vermont, 54.8 against 56.4.

South Dakota led in highest percentage for Willkie—57.4. Kansas was second with 56.9.

The total popular vote decreased this year from 1936 in five States. They were: Kansas, 4,725 less; Pennsylvania, 60,218; North Carolina, 16,814; South Carolina, 15,605, and Vermont, 643. Nebraska's final figures also may show a smaller vote than four years ago.

Yale Scientist Finds Cheap Way to Liquefy Helium

Using Sketch by Vanished Russian Physicist, Kapitza, He Builds Machine That Will Cut Cost of Product 90 Per Cent

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 13.—Using only a rough sketch drawn by the famous Russian physicist, Peter Kapitza, before he vanished from the western scientific world in 1935, a Yale professor has found a way to make liquid helium cheaply and quickly.

The university announced today that Cecil T. Lane, assistant in physics, had completed a machine which it described as unique in the new world.

Helium gas liquifies at only four degrees above absolute zero, the point at which all atomic action ceases, so to further his experiments in the electrical conductivity of metals to low temperatures, Lane sought a way to produce it inexpensively in practicable quantities.

The answer is the Kapitza machine, which manufactures a quart of liquid helium in little over two hours at about $5 a quart. Heretofore the same amount could only be produced in 24 hours and it cost $50.

Certain metals become superconductive at extremely low temperatures and Lane hopes to find why. If it were possible to produce an alloy which was superconductive at ordinary temperatures, he points out, electrical power could be transported great distances without waste.

Lane's machine has a curious history. Kapitza, who first bridged the gap between helium in its gaseous and liquid states, built one machine at the University of Cambridge but, in 1935, returned to Russia on a trip and has not been seen elsewhere since.

Unfortunately the Russian had carried the plans in his head and when Lane, learning of his work, wrote for them, he replied he was not at liberty to help.

The machine at Cambridge was too complicated to be readily dismantled for reproduction purposes and only the discovery there of Kapitza's rough design enabled the Yale man to build it for use on this side of the ocean.

Defense Cited As Air-Race Backers Quit

Cleveland Event Hits Snag; Need of War Planes Is Cause

Sponsorship of the National Air Races, World Series of flying, has been abandoned by National Air Races of Cleveland, Inc., until the national emergency is over, The Post learned yesterday. During 8 of the last 11 years the event has been sponsored by the Cleveland organization.

The National Aeronautics Association, under whose sanction the races are held, has not signed up another sponsor and 1940 has nearly elapsed with this year's races not yet held.

The Thompson Trophy, outstanding prize of speed flying, probably will remain in possession of Col. Roscoe Turner, who won it at Cleveland in 1939, unless some sponsor for the event, agreeable to the N. A. A., is found.

F. C. Crawford, president of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, reached by The Post at Cleveland, said decision of that city not to hold the races arose chiefly from the fact that energies of the aircraft industry must be bent toward production of more and better fighting planes. Furthermore, he added, normal speed of standard military aircraft already surpasses that of specially built racing planes and further production of the latter would be pointless.

"The current emergency," he said, has caused aircraft manufacturers to concentrate on the building of more and better military planes. Commercial developments, stimulated and proved in advance by racing planes, have contributed materially to military progress. The current military program has produced planes that surpass in speed any aircraft that were ever entered in the National Air Races. Military planes, in other words, have out-raced the races.

Though admitting that Cleveland had notified the National Aeronautic Association of its decision, Col. G. DeF. Larner, general manager, said yesterday the N. A. A. has not given up hope of holding the races in 1941.

"We will carry on negotiations with cities which want the races," he said, "and probably will reach an agreement with a sponsor."

British Fleet Spurs On Italian Rout With Storm of Steel From Offshore

sions blasted motor transport sky-high and smashed troop concentrations.

This was to destroy as much of the Italian base as possible, prevent any attempt at reorganization of the retreating forces at that point, and keep the Italians on the run far into Libya, perhaps as far as Derna, 150 miles from Bardia.

The whole coastline from Salum, on the Egyptian side of the line to Bardia, 37 miles away, was subjected to a devastating bombardment, some single attacks lasting more than an hour.

Shells falling into the main highway ripped open huge craters, blocking the way for Italian mechanized units.

These shellings constituted the Mediterranean fleet's share of the conquest of Marshal Graziani's army, touched off and still pursued by the British land and air forces which had waited 14 months for just this swoop.

Hurl Arms Aside

Thousands of the green-uniformed Italians hurled rifles and packs into the desert sands and ran toward Egypt. The prisoners may reach 30,000. They are now pouring behind the British lines so rapidly that there is no accurate count. Huge war supplies have been seized.

Indeed, there are good possibilities that the British offensive will not halt at the Libyan frontier, but that the troop will continue the push to mop up the Italians completely while they still are on the run.

I boarded this destroyer at an Egyptian port after struggling through a blinding sandstorm for fourteen hours, and sleeping one night in a cold concrete dugout of the British army in the western desert.

Behind barbed-wire entanglements, herded together on the sands near Mersah Matruk, more than 2,000 Italian prisoners shivered in British army blankets, trying to protect themselves from the gusts of and that whipped into their faces with the sting of cat o'nine tails.

Many of these crack Bersaglieri blackshirts were taken in the British surprise attack on the rear of the Italian divisions stationed at Sidi Barrani. It is known 14,000 prisoners were taken even before Sidi Barrani fell, and one captured Italian general told British officers that when that place was taken at least another 15,000 would fall into their hands.

Radio messages from the British tanks operating in the desert, picked up aboard this destroyer, exemplified the Italian willingness to quit the fight.

Tank Captures 500

An officer in a tank column which was pushing beyond Sidi Barrani broadcast:

"I am in the middle of 500 infantrymen, all with their hands up, but I cannot hold them much longer. Send infantry quickly."

Meanwhile, with other naval units, this destroyer was negotiating the mine fields to within half a mile of the shore batteries which Graziani had prepared hastily to protect his now-disrupted drive into Egypt.

These ships threw everything but the gun turrets at the Italians, giving the army moving along the seaboard the most destructive pasting in their history.

The first warships to go into action turned their big guns upon Maktila, 15 miles east of Sidi Barrani, Graziani's most advanced point. That armed camp was shattered by the bombardment and the British land attack facilitated.

By the first red light of the sun, then in broad daylight, the British warships pumped shells for more than an hour into the Italian positions, wrecking motor transports, blasting troop columns out of existence and tearing big gaps in the hard road that Graziani built.

The guns of this destroyer, too, flung projectiles upon the enemy advanced columns, started huge fires at many Italian bases and then swept westward along the coast to Salum, 7 miles from the Egypt-Libyan frontier, to deliver a fresh assault.

The Italian batteries at Sidi Barrani and Salum answered the fire of the British warships with vigor, but the closest miss was 20 yards away, sending heavy spray over the sides of the ship. There was no damage.

At Bardia, too, the naval forces frequently faced heavy fire from shore batteries, but the assault was the same.

Warcraft trains also are helping transport prisoners to Alexandria from other coastal points. They will be taken later to concentration camps in upper Egypt.

This destroyer took aboard 200 and dumped them at Alexandria. They slept through a cold windy night on the top deck, covered with heavy blankets.

G. O. P. Chiefs Confer Before Gridiron Fete

Seek Successor To Martin; Willkie To Speak Tonight

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Republican leaders yesterday opened a series of informal week-end conferences on the future of the "loyal opposition" as G. O. P. National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., restated his determination to resign in the spring.

Martin and New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, among the first to arrive for the Gridiron week-end, lunched with a group of House Republicans at the Capitol. Wendell Willkie will deliver the principal banquet address tonight.

Other conferences will be held today and tomorrow in hotel rooms, lobbies and offices as party leaders foregather for the first time since the campaign climax. The big question, as yet unanswered, was who will be the successor to Martin?

At the Capitol, Dewey was asked to address the Republicans' main Lincoln Day celebration in Washington February 12. Dewey, viewed as a likely contender for New York gubernatorial honors in 1942 and a Presidential prospect two years thence, accepted.

But in his Mayflower Hotel rooms last night Dewey declined to look into the political crystal ball.

Peace—It's Wonderful

"I am enjoying the first peace I have known in three years, and I like it," he said. "My term as district attorney runs another year, and I have no plans beyond that. For the present I am concerned only with being a good prosecuting attorney."

Martin said nothing has occurred to change his intention of stepping down from the chairmanship in March. He predicted that the question of a successor will be worked out within the party "without any dispute."

The House minority leader received with doubt the report that Wendell Willkie, the party's 1940 Presidential nominee, might be in line for the post.

"Mr. Willkie would make a splendid chairman," said Martin. He thought other Republican leaders "probably would be delighted, to have him chairman." But he questioned whether the chairmanship would fall in with Willkie's plans. What those plans are Willkie himself has not disclosed.

Willkie Men in New York

While national figures in both parties descended on Washington for tonight's banquet, leaders of Willkie clubs from every State and the District will convene in New York tomorrow to determine the future of the campaign clubs that bore his name.

First question on the Willkie Club docket was a change in name, at Willkie's expressed wishes. That decided, leaders assembled at the call of Oren Root, chairman, must determine whether the permanent organization will continue independently as it did in the campaign, or operate within the framework of the Republican Party.

In Washington, Martin received reporters following reports that colleagues were urging him to stay in the chairmanship role. He said he will call the executive committee in February and the national committee in mid-March.

"I would like to be relieved," he said. "I have a tough enough burden where I am (minority leader). It isn't essential that I resign right away, but I want to get out as soon as possible."

Hollister Mentioned

Asked who might succeed him, he smiled and said that out of 100 members of the national committee "someone has to get 51 votes."

Being mentioned as Willkie's choice for chairman should Martin step down was John Hollister, law partner of Senator Taft, but neither Taft nor Dewey would discuss prospects.

Dewey's invitation to address the Lincoln Day celebration here was extended by Representative U. S. Guyer, of Kansas, chairman of a joint committee of House and Senate Republicans. Martin said Willkie first was invited but was unable to attend.

The Republican national chairman announced he would voluntarily appear before the Federal grand jury investigating campaign costs Monday morning, and that a half hour later Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn will appear.

Spent Less Than Limit, He Says

Martin told reporters the Republican National Committee has spent from $75,000 to $100,000 below the $3,000,000 campaign limitation imposed by the Hatch Act for the year, and spent only half that amount in the campaign proper. The national committee, the Associated Willkie Clubs and the Democrats-for-Willkie organizations technically could have spent a combined $9,000,000 under the Hatch law, Martin held. He estimated all three spent within $3,000,000. Hatch Act limitations are on a calendar year basis.

"They'll find that we're well within the law," Martin said.

Bronzed from an outing at Nassau, Martin discussed the legislative outlook with reporters. He said there was a "good chance" the House will override any Presidential veto of the Walter-Logan bill.

Favors More Money for Dies

He thought the Dies investigation should be extended as a "restraint" on subversive activities, said it was the Administration's function and not his to propose new taxes, and indorsed proposals for a joint committee to consider nonmilitary spending cuts.

But he was skeptical about non-defense economies proposed by the President.

"They can and should cut expenditures, but I know that they won't. We have one of these little sermons on economy every six months. But each time the spending is increased."

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 13.—Two major indications of a stiffening combative spirit among the British people since the early days of the war are revealed in new studies just completed by the British Institute of Public Opinion.

In the early days of the war most Britons tended to regard merely Adolf Hitler and the Nazi regime as their enemies, and many of them persisted in the belief that the German people would not long support Hitler's adventures.

The first of the new British Institute studies shows that as the German people as a whole continue to support Hitler, a growing number of Britons have come to regard them—as well as the Nazi regime—as the enemy.

"Do you think our enemy is the German people or only the Nazi government?" British voters were asked. The replies were:

German People 52%
Nazi Government Only 48%

Less than 1 per cent of those interviewed were without opinions on the question. "It's a pity," say typical Britons, "but we can't beat Hitler without beating the German people, too, apparently."

Seven months ago, before the Germans had smashed their way through the Maginot Line and set up their guns on the English Channel, the British Institute found 41 per cent naming the German people as the enemy, 56 per cent singling out the Nazi government and 3 per cent undecided or without opinions.

Field interviewers for the British Institute, who have carried on their work despite bombs and blackouts, also asked British voters the following question:

"If we win the war, should we impose on Germany terms which are less severe or more severe than those which we imposed after the last war?"

Despite the fact that many British writers have traced Hitler's rise to power in Germany to the severities of the last treaty, Britons who have been staving off an aerial blitzkrieg for many months are not disposed to be more lenient.

Sixty-eight per cent say that the treaty should be "more severe"—if a victorious Britain were dictating the terms today—while 17 per cent say it should be "less severe" and 15 per cent are undecided.

Other examples of a stiffening attitude among Britons since the early days of the war have recently been reported by the Institute. Within the past fortnight the Institute found only 7 per cent saying they would favor a negotiated peace with Hitler at this time, as compared with 25 per cent who said they favored such a peace in March.

Plane Output Lags 30%, Knudsen Says

las, former Federal director of the budget and now president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, warned that if Germany swept the British fleet from the seas and dismembered the British Empire, the United States would be "the most vulnerable of nations."

Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co. Chicago, assailed the perfectly fantastic hysteria" which, he said, swept America after the fall of France. He declared his conviction that Great Britain would not be conquered, and that "there is absolutely no danger of an invasion of the United States, even if Germany is completely victorious."

Douglas charged that the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis is the avowed enemy of the United States. Only a nation "lulled to sleep with a false sense of security" could ignore this threat, he said, adding that Germany, Italy and Japan are "engaged in a world revolution and their ambitions are to reconstruct a world in their own ugly image of tyranny and violence."

A diametrically opposite view was expressed by Gen. Wood, who charged that British propagandists, aided by "misguided Americans," were seeking to prepare the American people for the "plunge into war." He said if the United States should enter the conflict the Nation would be engaged in war for from two to five years, that the national debt would rise to between $150,000,000,000 and $200,000,000,000 and the result would be "economic dislocation" and suffering.

Britain May Lose, Nelson Warns

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Donald M. Nelson, coordinator of purchases of the National Defense Commisison, declared tonight that Britain is "groggy" and "we must face the possibility that she may go down."

Then he appealed to the country to shake off its "drowsiness, induced by familiarity with the struggle" and give "speed, speed and more speed" in the rearmament drive.

Nelson, addressing the Bankers Club of Chicago, said, "The most annihilating wave of destruction the world has ever seen has been gathering force and momentum for at least five years" and "the peak of its fury has not yet been reached."

The country is menaced now, he went on, by the "sort of dullness and boredom that sometimes makes men go to sleep at the wheel of an automobile when they are driving at night and become too accustomed to the drone of the motor."

He called on the Nation to "prove to a doubting world that a democracy knows just as well as a dictatorship what it takes to be tough—and can do it in a democratic way."

Boy's Toy Plane Strikes Father, Causes Death

Newark, N. J., Dec. 13 (AP).—Herbert Reese, sr., 43, died last night in St. Michael's Hospital about five hours after being struck in the left temple by a toy airplane with which his son, Herbert, jr., was playing.

County Physician Harrison Martland said the tail of the metal plane, which weighed about 11½ ounces, had penetrated the skull, causing a fracture, and pierced an artery.

King Rewards 2 For Farming Amid Bombs

Britons Thresh Wheat As Shells Fall Near, Win Decorations

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 13.—Surely this is the first time in history that a British King has given a medal for gallantry to two men for threshing wheat.

The two men are Reginald Herbert Blunt and William Harris, who carried on their threshing job while German shells from the other side of the Channel fell about them and German planes machine-gunned them. Other hazards to continuing their work were German bombs and fragments of British antiaircraft shells.

Every farmer knows the importance of harvesting wheat at the right time; apparently these two men refused to let special hazards spoil their crop. According to the communique on the awards, "their work enabled many hundreds of bushels of wheat to be available for the nation, which would otherwise have been lost."

Splinters Found in Stack

Blunt is the biggest thresher operator on the Isle of Thanet, but owing to the shortage of labor, he was driving his own machines. Harris, who is 62, works for Blunt.

"Several times while we have been threshing in the fields near the coast shells dropped around my machine," Blunt said tonight. "The nearest was about 100 yards away. Two pieces of shell, one weighing 14 pounds, were found in a stack which the crew was threshing."

The quiet heroism of the thresher gang who, without a spotter to warn them and without tin hats, worked six weeks within the range of German guns, came out of Blunt's story today. On the last day of the work 32 German shells pitched around them. At one point shell fragments crashed through the drum of a threshing machine. On another occasion a Messerschmidt machine-gunned the field but failed to hit anybody.

Others Decorated

Other awards of either the George Cross or the George Medal went to many other civilians for heroic work in the air raids. Two women got the George Medal, one going to a member of the Coventry Red Cross who assisted in digging out eight people from an Anderson shelter and who attended their injuries, and another to an independent woman who worked over a half hour to rescue a baby trapped in a bombed farmhouse.

Other awards went to firemen and A. R. P. workers and even civilian workers, such as the employe of a gas company who climbed a gas tank in the middle of an air raid to plug holes from which gas was escaping.

Nazis Promise Not to Seize Relief Foods

By Walter Fitzmaurice.
International News Service Staff Writer

Germany has given official assurances that American food shipped to German-occupied territories "never has been and never will be confiscated or used by the German authorities."

The Reich has stipulated, however, that its distribution shall be "under supervision of the German Red Cross."

German policy was set forth, on his government's instructions, by the German Charge d'Affaires, Hans Thomsen, in a letter to Clarence E. Pickett, secretary of the American Friends Service Committee.

Reports to this Government that supplies on hand will avert starvation for the next five months has evoked a decision to shelve until March, at least, any negotiations with Britain for food shipments to any European country save France and Spain.

Authoritative quarters said the question remains open on food shipments to Spain and of milk and other vitamin foods for the children of France.

Pickett's committee has sponsored a plan to feed conquered peoples with funds of themselves and their governments, "frozen" by the Treasury here.

Besides consenting to relief work by neutral organizations among the needy, he said, Germany has "also exempted relief shipments from customs duty and transport charges."

200 Refugees Die in Wreck Off Turkey

Ship Carrying 300 Jews From Bulgaria Sinks in Marmora Sea

By G. E. R. Gedye
Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 13.—A refugee tragedy occurred yesterday in the Sea of Marmora close to Istanbul when a ship carrying some 300 Jewish refugees from Bulgaria was sunk, and more than 200 refugees, including 60 children, were drowned.

The ship, the Salvator, was an old Bulgarian vessel, which had been chartered by Jews expelled by the Bulgarians from Dobruja, and was to take them to Palestine. The vessel sailed under the Uruguayan flag.

According to some reports she was seriously overloaded.

Before reaching Silivri, 60 miles from Istanbul, last night, the vessel was caught in the teeth of a gale and the pilot, deciding that it was impossible for her to weather the storm, began to run toward Silivri with the intention of beaching her if possible. But as the vessel neared the shore the auxiliary motor broke down and the ship was left helpless. Finally, she was hurled on the rocks where she broke up. So far as is known, only from 100 to 150 of her passengers were saved; the majority of the victims were women and children.

The pilot swam ashore naked and ran several miles to the village of Silivri to seek help. Most of those who were washed ashore alive were also without clothing. It is feared many will die of exposure.

Chinese Boy Tells of British Scout's Duties

Now a Capitalite, He Describes His Part During Nazi Raids

Scouting under two flags has ranged from dodging bombs in England to trying for merit badges in America for a 13-year-old Chinese boy, now of Washington.

But in both "we strive for the same principles," David Hsia, of 3525 Davenport Street Northwest, asserted yesterday.

Five months ago the Chinese youth came to this country after two years spent in a country, first on the brink of, then full in the throes of war.

In England young Hsia attended one of the large English public schools in Taunton, Somerset.

"We served as sort of an auxiliary force," said the Chinese youngster, who speaks with precision. Some of his duties, he said, were "transmitting messages over A. R. P. (air raid protection) telephones, drilling in first-aid methods and doing such jobs as collecting old newspapers to be remanufactured into new paper—there is a shortage of newsprint, you know."

Before he left England and on his way to this country with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Hsia, the youth had other experiences that seemed to prove the proverb that life is a gamble.

"We were going up to London on a train when the sirens indicated bombers were coming over. We had the alternative of getting off and looking for cover or continuing. We decided to continue."

In mid-Atlantic two Nazi submarines were spotted from his ship, the new member of Washington's Scout Troop No. 54 said, and subsequently he heard that another American-bound passenger ship had been torpedoed.

Now a student at Wilson High School, David has not forgotten the plight of his former colleagues at Taunton. He frankly admires their courage and determination, saying:

"When I was leaving they told me they were quite confident of sticking it out, that anything but a British victory was impossible.

"It seems now they have stuck it pretty well."

Young Hsia will express that thought over Washington's new radio station WINX this morning in a broadcast telling of scouting here and in his embattled former home.

Testimony Conflicts in Probe Of Airliner Crash

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—Conflicting testimony was given today by two airline pilots about icing conditions above the Municipal Airport at the time a United Airlines plane crashed while preparing to land the evening of December 4.

Ten persons were fatally injured in the accident. Six others remain in hospitals.

Capt. Edward Couples of the Pennsylvania Central Airlines testified today before a five-man board of the Civil Aeronautics Authority that his plane picked up 1½ to 2 inches of ice while circling the airport awaiting authority to land shortly before the U. A. L. crash.

Another witness, Capt. Lawrence M. Holsinger of United Airlines testified, however, that he encountered only light ice over the airport, and that rain at a low altitude appeared to melt the ice layer.

Examiners said they hoped to conclude the testimony by tomorrow night.

Ambulances Speed To Texas City as Oil Fire Spreads

Galveston, Tex., Dec. 13 (AP).—A call for all ambulances in the city to go to nearby Texas City was received tonight after another crude oil storage tank was reported to have caught fire at the Southport Petroleum Co.

A least a dozen men were burned and a number of others were reported missing earlier in the day during efforts to extinguish a lightning-started blaze among the oil tanks.

One of the burning tanks boiled over, sloshing the flaming fluid onto a crew of about 25 firefighters.

It was not known immediately whether anyone was hurt in the second accident but local hospitals have been notified to be prepared for possible additional emergency cases.

Reserve Flying Officer Killed in Dayton Crash

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 13 (AP).—Second Lieut. A. R. Herron, Air Corps reserve, was killed in the crash of his single-seated pursuit plane on a farm 9 miles east of Dayton about 1 p. m. today.

Herron came to Wright Field only four days. His home was in Orlando, Fla.

Knudsen's Text Calling on Industry for 'Speed and More Speed' in Defense

Greatest Production Problem in Modern Times Confronts U. S., He Asserts

The text of the address by William S. Knudsen, Defense Commission member, in New York last night follow:

I venture to quote a portion of a recent message of our President to Congress: "We hope that the world situation may soon improve. But we are bound to be prepared for a long period of possible danger. Who can say, with assurance, that we shall not need for our defense every possible resource that exists or may be developed in our country?"

I am deeply honored by having assigned to me by our President a responsible part of this work of preparation and development.

Despotic power we abhor, but we must recognize that it compels the exercise of certain qualities which we must voluntarily exercise if we are to prevail in times of conflict. Among these qualities is concentration on definite objectives with singleness of purpose. We are a peaceful people. The ways of war are foreign to us. Our industries are now being organized for national defense which, to be effective, must be capable of the maximum of resistance to attack.

The modern machinery of that criminal violence, war, now threatening the very dignity of mankind, is enormous, complicated and swift in its scientific development. We are engaged in building a defense which our President has proclaimed shall be able to prevail against any possible combination and we will do it.

But as a producer, I say that our speedy procurement of the necessary defense implements which our President and Congress have promised the people demands intense concentration on production as an objective in itself.

Orders Described

I think with this before us we might begin to realize that conditions abroad, which change almost from day to day have tremendous influence on our future course in arming for defense. You have read about the billions of dollars of orders which have been placed with thousands of contractors and subcontractors all over the country, and perhaps it might be well if I gave you a quick description of what all this money means in units. In round figures:

50,000 airplanes.
130,000 engines.
17,000 heavy guns.
25,000 light guns.
13,000 trench mortars.
33,000,000 shells loaded.
9,200 tanks.
300,000 machine guns and ammunition.
400,000 automatic rifles and ammunition.
1,300,000 regular rifles and ammunition.
380 Navy ships.
200 mercantile ships.
210 camps and cantonments.
40 Government factories.

Clothing and other equipment for 1,200,000 men.

I have included with these quantities such British and other foreign material placed at the present time. The program, with all its subcontract and equipment features is large and is estimated to require about 18,000,000,000 man hours, conservatively. When we consider this addition to the regular production in the United States and realize that the larger percentage of this load lies in the heavy goods industries we are confronted, due to the time element involved, with the greatest production problem of any country in modern times.

The three factors involved in this problem are the Government as the customer, and industry and labor as the sellers. Behind the Government is the all-powerful force of the country's will and the all-important public opinion which must guide our actions in order to accomplish a successful result. In my earlier talks on the problems of defense, I stated that initially the defense load would be superimposed on the reguar business of the country until it became necessary to adjust. The simple reason for this was that the contracting and tooling-up period would not absorb employment which might be made idle by trying to restrict regular business during this tooling-up period. You are all perhaps familiar with the initial obstacles which had to be cleared away, such as appropriations, rapid depreciation allowances and the plant-facilities contract. All these have been cleared away and contracts have become a much simpler matter as far as procurement is concerned. I think we are successfully meeting the demand for spreading the Government plants to localities where surplus labor and skill is available. We haven't by any means satisfied everybody, but an honest attempt has been made to meet this part of the problem the best way. The orders are more than 85 per cent placed and we have arrived at the second stage of the problem.

Insurance Against Attack

What can I then consistently ask for now? The defense job to my mind has not been sufficiently sold to industry and labor as yet. The public generally is sold on defense—letters that I get and word of mouth information that I get clearly indicate that the man in the street is for defense 100 per cent and wants to see a lot of material turned out before he feels secure. But have the two most important elements, industry and labor, been fully sold on the serious side of the job? Conditions abroad change rapidly from day to day. The European war is gradually taking in more and more territory and most of us hope that we will have the time necessary to get prepared for defense and thus avert attack.

Well, that might be all right and I am not of the worrying kind, but after all a war depends just as much on what the other fellow thinks, as on what we think ourselves. So I think that the best and the only thing the United States can do and must do under the circumstances is to prepare swiftly and well to protect ourselves—for by doing that I feel that we have the only insurance policy against attack. It is our responsibility to see that this is done in record time and that we proceed right here and now to show the world that we can do the things we have been so wishfully forecasting the last six months. I myself have done my share of wishing and I am still betting that the tooling-up can be done quickly but I have to call your attention to some of the things I see which I think could help put still more steam into the picture.

Friday night has become the big night in most of our industrial picture. It used to be Saturday night—we have cut 20 per cent off our machine time. Can we afford to do this? Can't we stop this blackout, this lack of production, from Friday to Monday and get more use out of the equipment? We can train the men to operate it. Isn't it possible to put the defense job on a war basis even if we are at peace?

When I think of the seriouness of the whole world situation where the Americas are the only spot where freedom and law still have a foothold, I wonder if we are not justified in doing just that. Have we done everything we can to utilize existing facilities and offer them to companies having defense contracts? Can we subcontract more of our work and spread it so as to make speed and more speed that way? Every manufacturing concern which has a defense contract should be informed of idle facilities in the locality so as to confine the new equipment as far as possible to special machinery.

Plane Industry Expanding

Our machine-tool industry is working hard and well on their job. A recent survey shows that of 115 companies, 86 reported subcontracting as follows: 23 reported complete machines, 33 reported subassemblies, 80 reported parts subcontracted, 65 reported expansion averaging 30 per cent of plant area, and employment has been practically doubled in a year. Production of machine tools is estimated at a 50 per cent increase in 1941 over 1940, and total value, $600,000,000. Another valuable point in connection with the machine-tool industry is that you get your orders placed promptly so as to insure proper planning. An example of this was a recent instance where 30 machines had been omitted from the original order through an oversight and had to be arranged for. The machine-tool industry has set a very good example of speeding up and it is about the way other items of defense will have to proceed if we are going to make time.

The aircraft industry is still in the expanding stage, in fact it will be in the expansion stage until spring. Still, while the production is far from satisfactory we ought to gain from now on. Most of the heavy combat planes are new models not heretofore in production and this has slowed the job up. The engine companies need equipment, in fact 29 per cent of all unfilled machine tool orders are for the aviation industry; 37 per cent is for the Army and Navy, and other defense jobs; 28 per cent is for foreign customers and the balance covers miscellaneous. There is one question in aircraft which I think should be realized and that is that one plane is recorded as one plane, whether it weighs 4,000 pounds or 40,000 pounds and whether it has a 350-horsepower training engine or four 1250-horsepower fighting engines.

There is no use worrying about the light planes—we can get them. On fighting planes, we are in pretty fair shape but bombing planes, from 16,000 pounds up to the heaviest, take time and they must be worked out for real production before we can get quantities. A lot of work is being done trying to subcontract parts of the planes to body manufacturing companies and others, but this in some cases involves design in order to get the best production results and must be worked out with the plane assembler and the designer.

Frankly, we are not doing anything compared to the forecast by the manufacturers and the commission in July, and our hoped for production figures for January 1, 1941, of 1,000 planes per month, have to be scaled down by 30 per cent to be correct.

Four Light Tanks a Day

Guns and machine-guns are still in the tooling stage except for such capacity as was ready before we started. However, jobs that are wholly on machines will pick up fast when the tools are ready because the assembling is the smaller part of the hours per job. The same reasoning applies to powder and its ingredients, where the equipment installation rapidly responds to quantity production when finished.

Light tanks are being produced now at the rate of four per day and the larger so-called medium tanks will be available from three different plants by midsummer.

One thing, however, is sure. After we have all these orders in the field, we shall need a lot of help from experienced industrialists who perhaps are not involved directly on defense orders and who can spare us some of their time and experience to help solve problems which may arise on material, machines, specifications and design. It has been very gratifying to me to see how, during the last month, in factories having defense jobs, a great deal of study is being given to shorten operations over that planned in the original estimates. The good old American ingenuity is coming into its own and will help the elapsed time on the job and also the quality.

I don't know whether we have done a job yet in helping labor to get the proper understanding of what this defense job means to their future and their country's future. When I look over the trend in the occupied countries in Europe, America is about the only spot left where law prevails and where the man at the bench has a chance to make his way without clicking his heels.

We all seem to be worrying about how we are going to divide the profits without giving consideration to the fact that we ourselves have to furnish the price to buy the materials with. We hear so much about all the things that ought to be fixed right now. We read resolutions from every direction. It is my sincere hope that we will, as far as humanly possible, try to wipe out whatever differences there may be that do not depart from principles guaranteed us by the law of the land. The only way to get this program going is to get a concerted effort and a cooperative effort—an incentive fired with the spirit of sacrifice from everybody from the bench to the manager's desk. If we can accomplish this, our program is finished.

Sympathy With Labor's Rights

Congress has expressed the public will in laws such as the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act, the Walsh-Healy Act and the National Labor Relations Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act. It has specifically directed, by the Walsh-Healy Act that certain representations and stipulations shall form a part of the requirements and conditions in Government contracts involving over $10,000, and has prescribed the penalty for violations. Congress has conferred upon permanent competent departments—the Department of Justice, the Federal Trade Commission and the Labor Department, each equipped for the purpose, the power and responsibility in various forms, to enforce the other acts, to determine the fact of violation, to cause the violator to be punished and the wronged to be indemnified. Furthermore, Congress has not directed that all or any part of these other acts be written into Government contracts and the considered decision not to do so is as affirmative an indication of Congressional intent as is the direction for inclusion of the Walsh-Healy Act.

I am wholly in sympathy with the rights of labor under the law. I am happy to see the published expressions by labor of their willingness to mediate any difficulty before restorting to strikes, but I have also faith in labor's acceptance of the spirit of fair play and the necessity for avoiding discrimination against industry equally as unfair as discrimination against labor. I cannot regard our people as divided in essential interest so that we should consider labor and industry, or any other groups, as other than parts of a compact national body. I cannot believe that either needs to be coerced or purchased, in the invidious sense. I believe all will do as I intend to do: obey the orders of the Chief Executive and the laws enacted by Congress, as construed by the Courts, and help to prove that a free people are capable of self-discipline and of productive work superior to that of a dictator's subjects.

Down in Washington we are asked if we can do a lot of things. Some of them we can do and some we can't, but I can assure you this, that the group I work with on the Defense Commission will do everything that is humanly possible to smooth out whatever little difficulties you might have in the execution of your defense orders. We represent you. We are down there—you have the work in your plants. We hear a lot about what is called "red tape" which is another name for cumbersome procedure, but in justice to the top officials of the Army and the Navy, we can generally get action when requested. We are there to give you assistance in every way we can and all we ask is, give us speed and more speed. Full-time operations of all machines.

Protect Our Standards

Talk to your men—make them feel that it is their responsibility as well as yours. Ask them what they think of a civilization that drives women and children to live in cold and wet holes in the ground. We have gone back a thousand years in the last year. Why? Because a few individuals decide the actions of totalitarian nations and democracy is fighting for its life. It makes one shudder to think that brains can devise a situation like this—where we kill the harmless because we want to break the spirit of the people. Let us work and work harder so that the possibility of such barbarism spreading to our shores will be an impossibility forever.

Let's get ou this job spiritually. What is more important today? We are, to my mind, way beyond worrying about the cost; the laws we think we ought to have and the way we are going to live when this is all over. The important thing now is to get this job done or as much more of the job done as is required to permanently protect our standard of living and our institutions, our freedom and individual opportunities.

Let each manufacturer utilize his gift for organization to help the total picture. Let us not lay in inventories which we don't need. Let us order our equipment to come in to balance the operation. Get enough for one line and get it in operation without having an out-of-balance condition in the whole set-up. Sure, we have priorities, but the best way to have priorities is not to have to use them. I am reminded of my first experience with priorities in Buffalo 35 years ago. I was the assistant superintendent in a plant which manufactured a lot of different articles in rather small lots. hTe boss got the idea that the order clerk in the office should have a special ticket marked "Rush" made out of red pasteboard to drop in the boxes of materials the customers had written or wired for. I protested mildly that the foreman's work order was the best way to handle it, but the boss had his way and three weeks later I was able to take him through the shop and show him that practically every box had a red ticket in it marked "Rush." So we collected all the red tickets and went back to the old system of making the foreman responsible.

I mention this merely to emphasize the necessity for leaving responsibility with the proper authority. Most anybody can devise a system, but if there is no actual experience behind it, it is liable to be a hindrance rather than a help. We get lots of suggestions as to how to speed production and we examine them carefully in the light of our experience for what they are worth. We know we are subject to criticism, constructive and otherwise, but whichever steps we take, will be along the old-line policy of responsibility where it belongs.

I should like to ask your cooperation in another matter and that is prices. With bigger and better business, prices generally get jittery and for some reason or another are subject to a lot of pressure, mostly due to conversation and seldom to fact. A price inflation through imaginary shortages or attempt to corner a supply brings with it all the evils of a total spiral. The commission is studying this question from every angle. They are in possession of extensive data covering raw materials, both domestic and foreign, and will be happy to give you any information regarding availability of any material where shortages may be predicted without grounds.

Efforts Not Satisfactory

There is one more point I should like to bring before you, specifically as you represent the biggest industrial organization in America. Mr. Prentis has given us the most hearty and comforting assurances of the support of your great organization and we are truly grateful, but I am going to ask you—all you gentlemen who are located in all the manufacturing centers of the United States—to support a most earnest request from the Defense Commission.

I have not tried to paint the lily in this talk. I have tried to make it clear to you that I consider the defense effort to date not satisfactory enough to warrant hopes that everything is all well. Maybe I haven't made it strong enough. However, I feel that when you made your delivery schedules there was probably some cushion in them for contingenceis, strikes and acts of God. I am going to ask you to forget the delivery schedules and give us whatever you can in the way of advanced deliveries. I would not be surprised if they could be advanced 20 per cent.

The first half of 1941 is crucial, after that we are sure to be under way but if you gentlemen can help us better the deliveries so that we could be in swing in the second quarter, you will have done your country an outstanding service of protection, both of its shores and its institutions. And those of you who are tooled up now, please give us of your quantities as much more as is humanly possible. I would estimate very roughly that we are 20-25 per cent tooled up now, using the quantities as a base. I forecast that with your help we could be 50 per cent tooled up by April 1 and the balance by May 31. This is naturally an overall figure which cannot be applied to specific items, but I consider it possible to attain. I ask you to help get it.

I thank you in advance for whatever you can give us, and I thank you for the privilege of addressing the producers of America who in our day are the front line of defense.

Thank you again.

LONG-AWAITED LINK—A snip of a ribbon at 2 p. m. today and traffic will start rolling over the $5,000,000 bridge across the Potomac River, near Morgantown, Md. The 2.1-mile-long span by-passes Washington for North-South travelers and connects southern Maryland with Virginia

First Traffic to Roll After Gov. O'Conor's Wife Cuts Ribbon at 2 P. M.; Officials of 2 States Scheduled to Speak at Maryland Side

By the Associated Press

Morgantown, Md., Dec. 13.—Maryland Roads Commission officials completed final plans today for the formal dedication tomorrow of the $5,000,000 Potomac River toll bridge—emphasizing the function would be long on guests and short on ceremony.

Some 600 public officials and distinguished citizens of Maryland and Virginia have been invited to attend the exercises, which are scheduled for 2 p. m. at the Maryland end of the 9,620-foot bridge.

At noon, a number of the officials will be guests at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Crain, of nearby Mount Victoria, in conjunction with Dr. Hugh Young, of Baltimore.

The actual ceremonies at the bridge-head will be as brief as they can be made, Chairman Ezra B. Whitman, of the roads commission, said. His ideas, he explained, included brief remarks by himself and by the Governors of the two States, and the cutting of the ribbon by Mrs. Herbert R. O'Conor, wife of the Maryland executive.

The bridge is located a few miles upriver from Morgantown, and represents a link in the by-pass highway route of which the recently opened Havre de Grace toll bridge is a part. It will provide a direct North-South route by-passing Washington and traffic engineers estimate a toll load of at least 126,000 vehicles annually.

Rates for passenger cars will be 75 cents including driver, plus 15 cents for each passenger. Pedestrians must pay 15 cents each; buses will be charged $1.50 while a sliding scale for trucks ranges from a $1.25 minimum to a maximum of $5.50.

The bridge has a clearance of 135 feet above mean high water at midchannel.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 13 (AP).—Three State highway department engineers will represent the department tomorrow at the dedication of the new Potomac River bridge, linking Maryland and Virginia.

Representing the department will be C. S. Mullen, chief engineer; W. R. Glidden, bridge engineer, and A. H. Bell, engineer of surveys.

U. S. Liner, 186 Aboard, Sails From Lisbon

Lisbon, Dec. 13 (AP).—The United States liner Excambion sailed today with an overflow passenger list of 186, including 47 child refugees.

Mattresses again had to be placed in the salons. Of the youngsters aboard, 37 are being sent by the Unitarian Service Committee to join relatives in the New World and 10 are being evacuated from warring countries by the United States Committee for the Care of European Children.

Western Presbyterians To Honor Pastor Who Is Ill

While Dr. J. Harvey Dunham, pastor of Western Presbyterian Church, lies ill at his home, his loyal congregation tomorrow at 11 a. m., will observe the thirty-first anniversary of his pastorate there.

Dr. John Carruthers, of Pasadena, Calif., visiting minister at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church and leader of the Open Parish Hour, will conduct the tribute service in the church auditorium at 1906 H Street Northwest.

The Western Church, born of prayer meetings in what was known as the "Foggy Bottom" area in 1848, has made consistent progress under the guidance of Dr. Dunham, who in 1931 led his flock in the opening service for the new building.

When his thirtieth anniversary was celebrated with a reception on December 15, 1930, among the guests present were 25 members who had greeted him when he came as pastor in 1909. He was once moderator of the Washington and Baltimore Presbyteries.

The cornerstone of Western Presbyterian Church's first edifice was laid on August 25, 1854, under the pastorate of Dr. T. N. Haskell. The original membership numbered 24 people, and among the contributors to the original church building fund were President Franklin Pierce and Jefferson Davis, later President of the Confederacy. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant frequently attended services in the old building at Twenty-second and E Streets Northwest.

The present church, designed by Norman Hulme, of Philadelphia, is of English Gothic architecture, constructed of local stone. The bell, cast in England in 1872, was awarded a prize at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition in 1876 for its tonal qualities.

The Open Parish Hour, an interdenominational project led by Dr. Carruthers, will be held again tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Western Church with Carl T. Curtis, of Nebraska, member of the House Interstate Migration Investigation Committee, as guest speaker. The Open Parish group, which also met last Sunday night, rents the auditorium for a nominal sum.

Dr. Jones, Leader of National Christian Mission, Has a Colorful Career

By Robert Tate Allan

(This is second in a series of special articles about the coming National Christian Mission. Another will appear on December 21.)

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, famed missionary to India and native Marylander, and leader of the National Christian Mission, is a "natural-born speaker," according to his brother, Ira Jones, who runs a plumbing business in Damascus, Md.

"He was speaking in churches and Sunday schools when just a lad," he said of his brother, who is addressing thousands of people daily at the mission centers in cities throughout the United States. The mission is due here February 2-9, 1941.

Interviewed while Christmas shopping at Hecht's Department Store, the Damascus resident fingered his brow thoughtfully, and recalled that he and his brother were born on a farm near Clarksville, where they lived for about six years before moving to Millington, on the Frederick Road, where they studied in a brick schoolhouse.

Ira pointed out that Stanley subsequently studied at City College, Baltimore, with the intention of becoming a lawyer, but changed his mind and began preparation for the ministry.

According to a letter which Ira displayed yesterday, his brother had a close call from serious injury last week while enroute to a speaking engagement in Milton, Conn. He was rendered unconscious and his temple severly bruised when a truck ploughed into the rear of his car.

Because the National Christmas Mission is having a brief recess during the Yule holidays, there is a possibility that Dr. Jones may pay a visit to his relatives in Maryland very shortly, said Ira. Dr. Jones has a sister, Mrs. Helena Atkins, of Pasadena, Md. Another brother, Dr. Howard W. Jones, died about 10 years ago.

Probably the best-known missionary evangelist in the world today, Dr. Jones has been heard by thousands of people in India, China, Japan, Korea, Burma, Malaya, Europe and the Americas, and has a close acquaintance with Mahatma Gandhi; Dr. Rabindranath Tagore, the Indian Christian poet, and Charles F. Andrews, the well-known Scotch missionary and Gandhi's biographer.

Dr. Jones has thrice refused election to the Methodist Bishopric to continue the work he began in the Far East in 1907 when the Methodist Episcopal Church commissioned him pastor of the English Church in Lucknow, India. In 1917 he was named evangelist at large for the North India Annual Conference, a position he holds today.

DR. JONES

Beginning with his famous "The Christ of the Indian Road," eight books from Dr. Jones' pen have been best-sellers in America and England, and have been translated into 20 languages.

He came to the United States last summer to lead the first American Christian Ashrams at Saugatuck, Mich., and at Blue Ridge, N. C., as part of the spiritual preparation for the Christian Mission. "Ashram," of ancient East Indian origin, means a "forest colony for spiritual fellowship and meditation."

Mrs. Jones, his wife, whom he met when she was teaching in Isabella Thoburn College in Lucknow, is a member of the district board in India which is responsible for schools, goads, income tax in a district of 2,000,000 people. She is the only woman and Christian on the board. Dr. and Mrs. Jones have one daughter, Eunice, who last June married the Rev. James Andrews, a clergyman in India.

Leader of the local phase of the National Christian mission is Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, and a noted cleric of the Disciples of Christ denomination.

Since he came here in 1933 from the Independence Boulevard Christian Church in Kansas City, Mo., one of the largest churches of the denomination, Dr. Miller has led in the reduction of the outstanding building debt of National City Church by $254,238, and has welcomed 1,250 new members. He has helped raise $420,206 for missions, education and benevolence.

In addition to carrying on the enlarging work of the local church, he has visited many sections of the United States speaking in the interest of the local congregation before churches and conventions. He also has visited England and Scotland.

Pretty Model, 18, Wins Appeals Case

had worked for numerous painters, sculptors and photographers and that she had no thought of immoral appeal in posing for the amateurs.

Tears welled in her eyes when Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan declared an acquittal would give "carte blanche to the panderers of passion."

Defense Counsel Haskell Freedman, describing the girl as a professional model who posed at the rate of $1 an hour, asserted that "throughout history women have posed in the nude as models, and the same is true today."

Police testified they found pictures of Miss Warren in a raid on the studio, though she was not present at the time of the raid. Two other girl models and ten cameramen found in the studio also were convicted in the lower court on morals charges.

Miss Warren's appeal case was given to a Suffolk Superior Court jury late yesterday, and when a decision was not reached after several hours, Judge James M. Hurley ordered deliberations to continue, with the verdict to be sealed.

Filing of Liens On D. C. Autos Starts Jan. 1

All Incumbrances Must Be Recorded Under New Law

Beginning January 1, all automobiles registered in the District will be required to have "birth certificates."

For more than five years, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer has led a fight to provide his department with an office of records for filing auto liens. Legislation for the purpose becomes effective the first of the year and makes available space in the Recorder of Deeds Office.

For the first time in Washington, said Van Duzer, there will be permanent records of all incumbrances against each car operating on District license tags back to the time of its manufacture.

In the past, Van Duzer explained, titles issued to car owners "haven't been worth the paper they were written on." There was no law requiring liens to be recorded and the purchaser of a car—particularly a used one—had no means of telling whether it was mortgage free.

The 1941 titles will be changed to provide space for the Recorder of Deeds to certify that all liens on a particular vehicle have been recorded according to the new law.

History of each car also will be traced from the manufacturer through the various dealers and subsequent purchasers. A manufacturer's certificate, specifying engine numbers, serial numbers, etc., will accompany the lien records in each case.

Heretofore, said Van Duzer, titles issued by his department merely listed the car to a certain person and didn't mention any liens which might be against it.

As an example of the new system, Van Duzer explained:

All conditional bills of sale connected with a car will be filed with the Recorder of Deeds and listed on the title. The original purchase deal—whether outright cash or "on time"—will be a matter of record, as will each additional lien such as conditional sale purchases of tires, radios, batteries and other accessories.

"A person buying a car from its present owner," said Van Duzer, "will no longer have just the owner's word that no money is owed on the vehicle. Every cent unpaid on any portion of the auto will be a matter of record, open for public inspection."

The lien laws of Virginia and Delaware were used as a pattern for the local legislation.

Dr. Ballou To Be Honored By D. C. Groups

The 20 years of service that Dr. Frank W. Ballou has given Washington as its superintendent of schools will be celebrated at a banquet to be given in his honor at 6:30 p. m. today in the Mayflower Hotel.

Twelve organizations scheduled to collaborate are the Education Association of the District, the Elementary Classroom Teachers Association, the Association for Childhood Education, the Research Club, the Junior High School Teachers Association and Senior High School Teachers Association, Guidance and Personnel Association, D. C. Association of School Secretaries, Teachers Union, D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, Wilson Teachers Alumni Association and the D. C. Vocational Association.

A native of Fort Jackson, N. Y., Dr. Ballou received his bachelor degree at Columbia University in 1904; his master's at Cincinnati University in 1908, and his doctorate at Harvard in 1914. He was lecturer in education at George Washington University, 1928-34, and adjunct professor of education, 1934 to the present time. He became superintendent of schools in 1920 and prior to this period of service was active in several educational institutions throughout the country either as teacher or educational researcher.

He was a trustee of the Washington Public Library, 1924-30, and trustee of the local and national Universalist Church and moderator of the local church. Affiliated with an imposing list of organizations, Dr. Ballou numbers among these the American Council on Education, the Rotary Club and the Board of Trade.

Mrs. Mary S. Resh, of the Abbott Vocational School faculty, will preside.

Deserted by Husband and Ill, Mother of Twins Faces Christmas With Despair

Chevy Chase Ice Palace, 4461 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, which promised, through Garfield I. Kass, owner, to donate 25 per cent of its gate receipts (less the defense tax) from 3 to 5:30 p. m. Monday to The Post's Fund.

But, to relieve suffering and despair in the neediest families, many more gifts are needed immediately. Checks large enough to solve the emergency in an entire family will be welcome. But small gifts, too, have an important share in helping to stave off the suffering in these homes.

Family No. 33

Years of hard work, worry and finally a long siege of illness have brought Mrs. M. to the verge of a nervous breakdown. She has long periods of despondency and talks of suicide. Yet she has a great deal to live for—her young twins.

As a girl she had to support her widowed mother, who was crippled with arthritis. Because of that responsibility, she postponed marriage. The man to whom she was engaged for six years finally became tired of waiting and married someone else. However, four years she met a man with whom she thought she could be happy. He was willing for her mother to live with them. But he has now deserted her, leaving her with the responsibility of the two children.

On top of this trouble, she was taken ill this fall and had a serious operation. Although she has almost recovered from the operation, she is still in a highly nervous state. Working under the direction of the consulting psychiatrist, a representative of a family agency is trying to help her recover her balance and get a grip on her problems. This will doubtless be a gradual process.

But with timely help now, perhaps Mrs. M. will be able to take up the support of her children and mother within a few months. She is an excellent clerical worker with a good record. Since she has civil service status, she should be able to get a job after she is able to work. For the next three months, however, $180 is needed for this family.

Case certified and help administered by Family Service Association. Amount needed: $180.

Family No. 34

Although only 20 years old, Mr. B. has the responsibility of supporting a family with two children. Because of a serious glandular difficulty, he must attend a clinic daily for medical treatment. His small part-time job allows him to do some work and still attend the clinic, but does not pay him enough to support the family.

He has been attending a night school to prepare himself for a better job. And with a little help for the next three months, he should be able to handle his own problems.

He and his wife, 18, and the children, Bobby 2, and Jane, 5 months old, live in one furnished room with only a small alcove for a kitchen. Mrs. B. longs for a few extra pennies to buy cheerful curtains for the room and a heavy curtain to separate the kitchen from the sleeping room. But there is not enough money even for the food they need.

The family must have help for the next three months, a total of $60, until Mr. B. is well enough to take a full-time job.

Case certified and help administered by Family Service Association. Amount needed: $60.

selectees to Baltimore by train for rigid physical examinations.

Men passing the physical tests and otherwise successfully completing the process will be sent directly to Fort George G. Meade, Md. Those failing to qualify for service will be returned at Government expense to their homes here.

The many-roomed Baltimore Armory boasts extensive equipment and space for the induction examinations, besides club and reading rooms, large dining and drill halls.

Call for High Standards

Meanwhile, a War Department medical expert called for maintenance of high physical standards for trainees, warning that the citizen soldiers should be qualified to serve not only their one year in active service but for ten years in reserve corps "storage."

"We want men who are physically fit, who can stand the training for a year without having to run to the hospital to get fixed up after they have been in the camp for a week or so," Lieut. Col. Charles B. Spruit, former medical adviser of national selective service system, told a conference of 100 State selections heads at the Potomac Apartments headquarters.

He added: "Furthermore, if these men are to go into a reserve, they go into a reserve against a future day of call."

Recalling the World War, when approximately 30 per cent of registrants were rejected for reasons of physique, Col. Spruit said: "If we do no more than call out 30 per cent of the men who should not go to induction centers, we have prevented a major disturbance in the way of life of that many inductants."

Psychiatric Problem

The War Department spokesmen pointed to borderline psychiatric cases—those whose morale may break when they are moved from a civilian environment—as particularly troublesome.

Such men, he declared, are the "biggest nuisance in the Army. They spend most of their time in hospitals while in the Army and after they get out of service the Government has to take care of them and they cost the public huge sums of money."

At the same time use of police precincts by local draft boards was approved yesterday by the Commissioners.

Of the 12 precincts, however, only 6 have available space, according to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

U. S. Indicts 9 In Mexican Timber Fraud

Hundreds Declared Bilked of $7,000,000 By Sale of Stock

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Nine persons were indicted by a Federal grand jury which charged a mail fraud of nearly $7,000,000 through promotion of the International Syndicate and the Resources Corporation International, concerns claiming ownership of 2,000,000 acres of Mexican timberland.

The 26-count indictment alleged hundreds of investors were defrauded through sale of stock in the companies, once headed by the late Harper S. Hoover.

Defendants named after a two-month investigation were:

Arnold Joerns, 50, Chicago, president of the Resources Corporation International, former head of an advertising concern bearing his name.

Former Head Charged

W. L. Kellogg, 66, Chicago, a former president of R. C. I.

George E. Howard, 45, Chicago, secretary of R. C. I.

Bruce L. Hoover, a nephew of the late promoter who died in an automobile accident several months ago. Bruce's home was listed as Mexico City and San Antonio, Tex.

William D. Durland, New Orleans, charged with having valued the companies' holdings fraudulently at $110,000,000.

Leonard L. Cowan, Chicago attorney, charged with being active in organizational activities and holding secretarial positions in the companies.

Roy Soldwell, an accountant and auditor.

John J. Jennings, Detroit, a stockbroker, accused of handling some of the stock deals.

Franklin A. Hofheins, president of the Am-Sales Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., who had contracted for cutting the timberland, the indictment said.

Bonds Set at $10,000

Bonds of $10,000 each were set and bench warrants were issued.

A. Bradley Eben, assistant United States district attorney, said Hoover organized the International Syndicate in 1928 with capitalization of $1,500,000. In 1931 the Resources Corporation International was organized, he said, and several million dollars worth of additional stock sold.

Although the company actually owned valuable timberlands in Mexico, Eben said, its operators overvalued the holdings and withheld from investors the fact that the lands were 700 miles away from transportation facilities.

Prominent Victims

Ten prominent alleged victims were named in the indictment. These included Stanley S. Kresge, New York, chairman of the board of Kresge and other department stores, who, the indictment stated, lost about $500,000. Others listed were:

John J. Woolverton, South Bend, Ind., president of the Malleable Steel Range Manufacturing Co; E. J. Gittins, Racine, Wis., former chairman of the J. I. Case Co.; George F. Argetsinger, Rochester, N. Y., former New York State Senator and comptroller of Rochester; T. R. Mead, Indianapolis, president of the Mead-Balch Construction Co.; J. N. Kurn, St. Louis, president of the Frisco Railroad; B. J. Porter, vice president of the Timken Roller Bearing Co.; George B. Shaw, Dixon, Ill, publisher; H. Edison Webster, Buffalo, N. Y., attorney; Col. George T. Langhorn, United States Army, retired.

Manufacturers Join Up

The National Manufacturers Representatives took form yesterday in Washington with 35 members as charter members. Thomas T. Hildebrandt, of Hildebrandt & Co., was elected president. C. W. Shinnamon and Conway Cooke were named vice presidents.

Symbol Of Helplessness

Few tears will be shed over the final abandonment of the District reorganization bill. Senator McCarran has decided that the bill must expire with the Seventy-sixth Congress because it would require many amendments and because there is no civic demand for its enactment. At least the latter excuse for nonaction seems to be well founded.

Most civic groups lost interest in the bill, in spite of the constructive minor reforms it would have effected, because it made no provision whatever for any measure of self-government for Washington. If the bill had contained a grant of suffrage to the voteless District, it would have been supported by a "civic demand." But in that event it probably would not have emerged from the House of Representatives. The disheartening truth is that Congress persistently ignores legislation extending the franchise to local residents and most of the civic groups here will be satisfied with nothing less.

Senator McCarran's lack of enthusiasm for this so-called Seal bill could be readily overlooked if it were the first step toward the advancement of a more comprehensive plan to modernize the scattered, confused and impotent agencies that serve the District in place of a government. But he gives promise of no such proposal. The defeat of this inadequate bill means that the task of devising a real government for the Capital City must begin all over again, with little prospect that a more satisfactory measure would attain as much support in Congress as the Seal bill has done.

It is this seeming indifference which rubs in the plight of the District. Congress clings to the powers of a city council for Washington, yet it refuses to exercise those powers even to set up administrative machinery adapted to the needs of a modern city. How long will it take Congressmen to realize that this arbitrary treatment of a community now sheltering 600,000 voteless inhabitants injects a mocking note into their oratory on American democracy?

No Wasted Perfume

One thing you can always say about life at the Teachers' College of Columbia University: there's never a dull moment. At present a group of pedagogues, parsons, businessmen and labor leaders are meeting there to determine how our sprouting crop of young American geniuses can be harvested to the best social advantage.

There was, of course, a time when genius hardly seemed prevalent enough to constitute a great national problem. In those hit-or-miss times the generality of one's countrymen could not even be sure that one was really a great genius until after one had conquered an empire, or had written Hamlet, or had worked out a new theory of the universe, or something of that sort. Indeed, an era like that of fifth century Athens (B. C.), or thirteenth century Italy, or sixteenth century England, which could produce a dozen conspicuous and contemporary examples of genius in one field or another, was afterward described enviously as a "golden age."

But that, of course, was before the Stanford Revision of the Binet-Simon tests. Today the presence of genius can be detected even in a 5-year-old merely by asking him such questions as how he would go about retrieving a baseball he had lost among the weeds in a circular field. And since virtually every school child is subjected to these tests at one time or another, there is no longer any reason why our Miltons, Hampdens and Cromwells and so on need live and die in obscurity and frustration. Instead, they can be discovered, segregated and "trained for democratic leadership." The purpose of the conference at Columbia University is to work out the methods whereby all this can be best accomplished.

It all sounds very simple and ingenious. With a plentiful supply of hothouse-grown genius thus on tap for all emergencies and for all responsible places in public life, democracy can be rid at last of its dread incubus of mediocrity. Every general can be a Caesar, every admiral a Nelson, every Secretary of Agriculture a Mendel, every Secretary of War a Carnot.

Of course it is not what you could call a brand-new idea. For centuries the Chinese used to choose their public officials and court poets by asking them questions much like those of the Binet-Simon tests. And long before Plato and his "philosopher kings" a great many Greeks had an idea very like the one to be worked out at Columbia. Only for some reason the Greeks didn't call it democracy. They called it aristokratia, or leadership by the "best" (aristos). To the Greeks democracy meant a system under which you could get rid of a man for no better reason than that you were sick and tired of hearing him called a genius.

Find The Pea

Doubtless gingered up on orders from Berlin, which has to counter somehow the Greco-British successes in the Mediterranean, Mr. Matsuoka has again gone out of his way to declare that the Axis is "the keystone of Japan's foreign policy." But this time he has done so pianissimo. For he went on to say that there is no need for current differences between Japan and the United States to lead to an armed clash "if both of us attend to our own business." Then, as if recalling his original instructions, he added that the Nipponese wouldn't quibble about living up to Article III of the three-power Axis agreement by going to the assistance of Germany or Italy, "should the occasion arise."

Well, the occasion for somebody to go to Italy's help has surely arisen. The Duce for reasons of his own is averse to asking aid from Berlin, though pretty soon he may get that aid thrust upon him; but he would doubtless not be as averse to the Japanese as to the Germans bearing gifts. The question is: How could the Japanese help?

Of course, the question hasn't even arisen in Tokyo, and for a reason aside from the fact the Japanese couldn't jump the British blockade. Neither Nazi Germany nor Japan is interested in the fate of Fascist Italy except as it bears upon its own. The Axis is a marriage of convenience for Hitler which the Japanese as well as the Italians may one day find out is bereft of all sustenance. It was useful to Japan only to the extent that it might frighten the United States in the Pacific. And Mr. Matsuoka on the morrow of the signature tried to make the most of it with a swashbuckling speech warning the United States that if it got into the war in Europe it would have to reckon with the Japanese. Premier Konoye added a dark hint more or less to the same effect.

Never did the Japanese make a greater mistake than to think that the American people could be blackjacked into apologetically putting their foreign policy in their pockets. There was a time when Ambassador Saito made a great name for himself in Japan because he assured his superiors that they had nothing to fear from the United States but paper protests. He seemed for a time to be proved right. And so in Japan they felt that at last they had got the American number. But it is always dangerous to apply the same measuring rod in all contingencies, and the American riposte to the 3 power Axis agreement, with its impertinent Article III, was to spur American aid to China and Britain (and, latterly, Greece) in their struggle against the Axis powers. What, however, bothered the Japanese more was the further suggestion of the State Department to our nationals in the Far East that they should come home.

The reaction in Tokyo was a complete about-face. Immediately Mr. Matsuoka put up his two-handed sword, and complained that he had been misunderstood. Nothing, it seems, had pained the Japanese more than this evidence that we might think there could be trouble in the Pacific. Such a complete climb-down must have been just as irritating to Hitler as Mussolini's essay in Albania, for the Fuehrer had roped in the Japanese in order that their adhesion to Article III might frighten the United States in the Atlantic. Here Mr. Matsuoka was making the Axis bludgeon bend like bamboo. Doubtless he reminded his Japanese partner that the bludgeon was the only weapon tolerated in Axis diplomacy.

But the Japanese, having scrambled back on the fence, aren't anxious to eat any more words, and so the current declaration is an Oriental combination which leaves Article III like a dazzling pea in an international shell game; now you see it, now you don't. The United States can only reply to a deception which cloaks naked aggression by refusal to give such aggression any further sustenance—as has been done by the extension of the category of exports to be covered by the licensing system. Peace is a condition of things close to the American heart, but there can be no peace in the Pacific till Japanese words have better commerce with honesty—till, specifically, Japan takes the lead in "attending to its own business."

He Kept His Head

Mr. Knutson: Mr. Speaker, I happen to be one of two members of the House who voted against war in 1917. (Applause.) I make this statement simply to show that I prefer peace to war when war can be honorably avoided, but I am wondering where we would be today if France had had such a law [a neutrality law] upon her statute books in 1776.

As I see it, if all the great powers of the world enact legislation similar to this, it will mean the end of all small countries within the next 50 years; and I am speaking more particularly of agricultural countries, because they will not be in a position to maintain their independence.

Mr. Speaker, there is more than one angle to this question. Indeed, over in Africa today there is every prospect of an early war; and we will refuse to sell to a people who are threatened with having their liberties taken away from them, the means with which to defend themselves and to preserve their independence. Yet we say we believe in democracy.

I am wondering how carefully this legislation has been considered. Is it not about time that Congress stop legislating by hysteria and get down to brass tacks and legislate in a practical manner? I would not do anything, knowingly, to bring on a war, but I would do everything in my power to help another country retain its independence; and I cannot agree with my distinguished colleague from Minnesota when he says that he prefers peace to liberty. I do not want to be a canary bird in a gilded cage. I would rather be a soaring eagle, free and untrammeled. — Congressional Record, August 23, 1935.

No Boom For Them

The Investment Bankers Association at their Hollywood, Fla., convention devoted a great deal of their attention to the financing of the defense program. Rising business activity and pressure for plant expansion in defense industries have brought with them increased demands for long-term capital. Some of this capital will be supplied by the flotation of new security issues, underwritten and disposed of through the selling mechanism provided by investment bankers. Discussion naturally revolved about the problem of how to secure a maximum amount of this new financing business.

Amendments to the Securities Act to reduce the costs of registration and simplify procedure are urged as a means of encouraging new public offerings. Doubtless the bankers noted some encouragement in this respect just prior to the convention. The SEC had made it easier to float small issues by exempting from registration offerings of less than $10,000. Restrictions upon the private placement of new issues, which make it possible to avoid the costs of registration and payment of underwriters' commissions, would also bring some additional business to the investment banking fraternity. But the amount of new capital for defense purposes obtained by public offerings of securities depends upon a number of factors having nothing to do with the restrictive provisions of the Securities Act.

The restrictive provisions of the Securities Act have helped to cause stagnation in the market for new capital issues. But fundamental changes of our economic and financial institutions have played an even more important part in reducing the volume of new security issues offered to private investors. The Government itself has played an increasingly important role as a provider of new capital. And it will undoubtedly supply a goodly part of the capital required to finance the extension of defense facilities, either directly or indirectly in conjunction with the banks. Consequently it seems altogether unlikely that the defense program will result in an expansion of new public offerings of stocks and bonds at all commensurate with the expanding demand for new capital.

Promoting The Duke

Just because the Duke of Windsor has flown to a conference in Caribbean waters with President Roosevelt, the report has found its way into print that the duke has got the first refusal of the vacancy at the British Embassy in Washington. Such a report on its face sounds as if it were made up out of whole cloth. At one time the duke may have earned his sobriquet as the greatest salesman of the British Empire. But that was so long ago that the interval cannot be measured in years. It is going to be difficult for the British to find the right person to step into Lord Lothian's shoes, but no doubt they will insist upon choosing a person with a different record from the duke's, one, moreover, who has been associated with the war effort in close fellowship with Premier Churchill. And this in itself would let out the duke. The duke had a splendid record in World War I, but in this war he acted merely as a liaison officer with the French, commuting between Cap Antibes and headquarters. Nor was it a very effective liaison, though, to be fair to the duke, any enthusiasm that he might have put into the job doubtless would have been wasted. In all the circumstances he was more suited to the post to which he was then transferred as governor of the Bahamas, and one may be tolerably sure that it was in connection with these duties that the duke went to see the President.

BROWN NOVEMBER SNOW

The woods are growing deep each day
With a snow that will not pass away,

With a snow that settles dry and warm
Out of a sky without a storm,

With a snow that strips the maples bare,
And clears blue pathways through the air—

That brings to the startled eye again
That looks through a morning window pane

Strange houses that it had not seen
Across the summer's dense ravine.

Here is a snow that will withstand
The sun's assault on the roofless land,

A snow whose flakes will linger on
When a hundred springs have come and gone.

Favors Ultimatum

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler's expression of his indubitable belief that totalitarian and democratic forms of government cannot co-exist in the world of today gives the United States of America its cue for calmly but convincingly saying to him: O. K., you have thoroughly sold us on this view of yours, and since one or the other form of government must go, our deliberate decision is that it is to be the form of government which you represent.

In accordance with this decision, the United States now serves notice upon you that it shall not only give the uttermost aid to the enemies of the Germany that you rule over at present but, in case this should not prove sufficient to give your enemies the victory over you, shall itself engage you in war when, if not where, your present enemies leave off.

Your Germany must, therefore, fully realize that it will have to continue in a state of war until your armed forces are back where they started from in September, 1939, and until its leaders are in a state of sanity in which negotiations that take the rights of all men, irrespective of nationalities or forms of government, into account are possible.

This, of course, will mean the restoration to the countries you have already or may hereafter invade whatever is rightfully theirs. You may discount these words of ours but make no mistake that you will do so at the expense of the German people.

America First

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Commendations are in order on the formation in Washington of a branch of the America First Committee. If the America First Committee upholds America first in principle and is for a stronger defense for the United States and its neighbors to the north and south, it is to be applauded and every support should be given it. America needs a spokesman of that type.

Pressure here and throughout the country for America's entrance into war is supported, not by the common people which make up America's huge population, but is supported by a small but strongly financed group of women and men whose sympathies are not American. May the Washington branch of the America First Committee meet with success in keeping the American people and their representatives in Congress informed on America's problems. FREDERIC FROST.

For Better Housing

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to our First Lady's speech on the housing problem, I think it is one of the most important problems of any city, or town for that matter.

I agree with her in regard to incoming new residents and their housing facilities. I was most shocked with what I found when I hunted for a home for my family in 1936. I had a hard time finding a home where we would be able to keep our health, and at the same time be able to afford the rent. I have stayed in the same house since August, 1936, till now and at present, we are trying to get into one of the new Alley Dwelling Authority houses. They are all a person can wish. I have seen them and am just waiting for the day when they will say O. K. so I can move in.

My present home is one built "on the ground"—that is, no basement—and we have had two cases of pneumonia while living there and plenty of rheumatism and can't heat the place except in mild weather. We couldn't get out either, because we couldn't pay more than $30 and still keep our belts tight. Takes money to feed five boys.

Our First Lady has preached better housing ever so many years, so let's help her and the more power to her.

No comfort in a home makes for lots of trouble.

"Defender Of The World"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondence columns daily reveal the reaction of many people regarding help to Britain in the present crisis. Some advocate every assistance "short of war". This I cannot understand. Some advocate open participation in the conflict. Others say let Britain go to hell; she is nothing to us.

The war in Europe is not an European war. It is a world war. It is not a battle for territory. It is a struggle for the establishment of certain principles. It is not confined to Europe or rather its results will not be confined to Europe. It embraces the aspirations of Germany, Italy, Japan and eventually of Russia. It is a conflict to determine whether the world shall be dominated by totalitarian methods or democracy shall survive.

Now, what is the position of Uncle Sam? He is opposed to the totalitarian regime. He is afraid of it. I picture him at his cottage door, the garden path leading to the gate. At the gate is the barbarous Hun demanding entrance, but John Bull stands on guard, and Uncle Sam, in fear and trembling, with two guns in his hands, cries:—"John, John, take my guns. Do not let him touch me." And, as a possible afterthought, Uncle Sam says: "John, you must pay me for the guns."

Is this an exaggerated picture of the present position? I think not. Not Great Britain, nor the Western Hemisphere is facing a crisis. The world is facing a crisis. Nations shall be free or enslaved. There can be no argument about this. The treatment of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium, Holland, Denmark and France indicates beyond doubt what the future portends if Hitler is victorious.

What should Uncle Sam do? England does not require his army. But she needs his ships, his airplanes, his Navy, at once. Uncle Sam has a great opportunity. He should not leave the defense of the world to John Bull. It is not fair. He should not use another nation to defend himself.

What is the position today? With the assistance of Macaulay I will tell you.

"Look how the Lion of the Sea lifts up his ancient crown,
And underneath his deadly paw treads the gay lilies down.
So stalked he when he turned to flight, on that famed Picard field,
Bohemia's plume, and Genoa's bow,
and Caesar's eagle shield.
So glared he when at Agincourt in wrath he turned to bay,
And crushed and torn beneath his claws the princely hunters lay."
So glares he now when barbarous
Hun is thundering at his gate,
So glares he now when in his paw
he holds the whole world's fate.
Alone, undaunted, proud, serene,
his Union Jack unfurled,
He hurls defiance at the foe, as defender of the world.

The Hatch Act

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: When any important problems arise on the American political or economic scene, people are prone to ask: What would Washington say? or Jefferson or Lincoln?" Well, I can tell you just what these three fathers of American democracy would say about the Hatch Act were they here today. They would say that law is undemocratic legislation enacted by a majority to destroy the liberty of a minority in the employ of the Government. The Hatch Act is tyranny unbridled, not a whit less tyrannous because it bears the approval of the majority.

I have a hobby that I enjoy very much. It is one that has done much to lead me away from extravagance to a life of moderation in which I have found much joy and happiness. The hobby to which I refer is writing letters to my favorite editors on various subjects and the nearest and dearest to my heart is the subject of politics, but the Hatch Act, I have sadly learned, forbids me to express my opinion on any matters which relate to politics.

I am a political son of my political Government and it is my earnest desire to advocate at will against dirt as trumps in politics. I do not believe that under the Constitution of the United States the Hatch Act can rightfully deprive me of a happiness in which I serve both God and country. We believe as Americans that "all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." It is my prerogative to speak or write in behalf of my Government, and no man may deprive me of this right until I have proven myself unworthy of it.

What is your sincere opinion?

On Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The good fortune of Virginia Lewis, a former domestic, who "gained enough recognition to be assured a musical career and further tutelage under an outstanding voice instructor," should be welcomed by all citizens who believe that democracy is something more than rendering lip-service to a few patriotic phrases and hanging a flag in the window.

America will be enriched by the soprano voice of Miss Lewis and the steps of the Lincoln Memorial await the day when the good Christian people of Washington deny her a hall to sing in, but though the gods smile favorably upon this Cinderella girl, even those of us who are more fortunate and less oppressed are not safe so long as democracy in America begins and ends with a friendly gesture from the White House toward the less fortunate.

Booker T. Washington was an ultraconservative, yet he wrote in his autobiography, "Up From Slavery:" "I do not believe that any State should make a law that permits an ignorant and poverty-stricken white man to vote, and prevents a black man in the same condition from voting." Gen. Lafayette also commented upon the fact that during the Revolution he observed black and white sailors and soldiers eating, working and fighting together with only friendly disagreements.

To insure our democracy we must extend the benefits of it to all races regardless of their talent or lack of it. A democracy that never comes out of the parlor is not worth saving. THOMAS MONTICELLO.

Little Gray Man

HAVE YOU, too, wondered who it is that creeps up behind you, all invisible, and makes uncouth noises that cause people to turn and stare? If so, read on; for today the shroud of mystery is torn aside.

It's the little gray man with the three-cornered hat who lives in the Capitol dome.

And high time it is that the good folk of the Federal City learned the truth about this eldritch character, who, let it be said, modestly refuses to accept sole credit for the nefarious happenings so long suffered by long-suffering Washingtonians.

"My cousins, the little green men who live at the bottom of the Potomac, have been of invaluable assistance," he states. "They were my first inspiration."

Standing but 2-feet-11 in his purplish-gray Indian moccasins, the dusty denizen of the dome presents quite a startling appearance with his smoky-gray gaiters and his greenish-gray breeches, and a pearl-buttoned cruiser-gray jerkin. Topping it all is the silvery-gray tricorne.

"How is it," I began, "that you wear such an elegant pair of sideburns rather than the customary long beard?"

"Although I am a great believer in tradition," he replied, "and do not approve of change merely for the sake of overthrowing precedent, and although this is a new America with good old-fashioned ideals nevertheless—new problems must be met with new measures, however old. What this country needs most are the tried and true innovations of our fathers and the traditions of the generations to come.

"I once had a beard, it is true. Beautiful, it was. Gray. But I was forced to do away with it, on the grounds that it seriously hampered my sneaking up on people. The darned thing was always tripping me."

Questioned as to his origin, the little gray man told of his ancestors, who lived in old Tiber Creek. "They say that one of my great-uncles—I guess it was Uncle Woolfington, on my mother's side, or maybe it was his brother Barkleigh—anyway, they say he even used to tickle the toes of one of your early Presidents, who enjoyed ambling down from the White House to take a dip in the creek."

The Nation will be relieved to know that these indignities could not last forever, as the Tiber gradually filled in, and the little gray man's progenitors were forced to move. "Most of them merely shifted over to the Potomac," he recalled, "but I have always suspected that a few renegades still inhabit the old home creek.

"You see, when the foundation for the new Commerce Building was being excavated, the workmen ran into the old Tiber, which by that time had been driven completely underground. The havoc that was visited upon the contractors and their works showed unmistakably our family touch."

"You know," I remarked, "it has just occurred to me that you are speaking perfectly good modern English. I should think that you would at least use early Colonial American dialect."

"Shucks; have to keep abreast of the times. Why I can even—" and whisking off his three-cornered hat, with seven deft, lightning-swift gestures, he transformed it into what looked like a cross between a fireman's helmet and a turtle.

"Streamlined," he explained. "Six waves would have made it vintage of 1910, or thereabouts. Or now I could wave just once, backwards, with the same result."

"Well, that's just fine, but let's put it back the way it was first." I suggested; "it goes better with the rest of you."

"Yes, it does," he admitted, rubbing his chin ruefully. "I never could get the whole outfit to go along with the hat."

"Tell me," I asked, when he had finished the seven strokes (backwards): "Have you ever met the little man who wasn't there?"

"My dear sir!" Drawing himself up haughtily, he must have reached at least 3 full feet. (I peeked down, and sure enough; he was standing on tip-toe.) "I am the little man who wasn't there! One would think that by now you could have told. Good day, sir." And his legs started to disappear.

"Oh, wait—don't go!" I cried. "I apologize. It was thoughtless of me, really."

"Well," gruffly, "what more d'ye want?"

"You haven't told me much about yourself—what you do, and all that."

Mollified, he beamed and went on. "Oh, it isn't much, I guess. You already know how I like to embarrass people." Chuckle. "But while Congress is in session, I don't have much time for that; I leave it to my cousins, and take care of the more important details myself."

Such as? "For one thing, a favorite stunt of mine is inserting 'Laughter' where 'Applause' should go and vice versa, in the Congressional Record. It comes out that way too, and nobody seems to notice it. You've heard of 'unseen forces at work in our Government?' That's me.

Another of his pastimes is taking "Stairway Closed" signs away from their proper places and putting them in front of such spots as Senators' private entrances. Also, he steals "Vacancies" placards from the city's innumerable rooming houses ("Too many rooming houses and not enough vacancies," he says) and hangs them out on the balconies in the House and Senate—right in front of the press galleries.

"And you know those little dinguses—or is it dingi—on the legislators' desks, the onces that have sand in them, for blotting up ink? They've been there ever since Congress opened up shop; that was before blotting paper had been invented. Nobody uses them any more, except the new boys—that's the way you tell 'em—but for some reason another, they have to be refilled all the time. That's me again.

"Every now and then I go out onto the floor—invisible, of course—and toss tiny pinches of sand into the eyes of certain Congressmen."

Smirking, starting slowly to disappear, "I guess by now," he murmured, "you can tell which ones they are." ROLAND ROBERTS.

Timeless Causes

Case Presented by Lothian

AN AMBASSADOR of Great Britain, last Wednesday night, said to the American people:

"It is for you to decide whether it is to your interest to give us whatever assistance may be necessary in order to make certain that Britain shall not fail. . . . We are, I believe, doing all we can. . . . The issue now depends largely on what you decide to do. Nobody can share that responsibility with you. It is the great strength of democracy that it brings responsibility down squarely to every citizen and every nation. And before the judgment seat of God each must answer for his own actions."

Lord Lothian said that; and within a few hours he, a man of strong religious feeling, went to his personal rendezvous with God. That this dramatic incident attended his last words to America should not influence our answer. It does not need to.

WHETHER any nation or individual should give his sympathy and help to one of the sides in any war depends mainly on whether a certain kind of issue is involved. Many wars have been merely territorial, or dynastic, or mere rivalries of pride or greed between nations or leaders. In that kind of war, the matter of taking sides need cause no one to sweat the blood of conscience.

But there are wars which involve issues, issues universal and timeless—wars which are milestones in what the historian Lecky called "the natural history of morals." Lecky treated the spiritual element in the human race—what we call civilization—as if it were a living organism. He treated it as subject to the same laws and conditions as a biological organism or genus. Its natural course is growth, expansion, elevation to higher and higher standards. Nevertheless it sometimes suffers reverse, and always it is subject to the possibility of extinction. The recurrent crises, which determine whether it will survive and go on, or be set back and possibly perish, take the form of wars. When there is such a war, the matter of taking sides is not to be determined by considerations of loss or advantage, individual or national. The decision is within the world of spiritual responsibility.

WHAT is the thing we call civilization? How, if at all, is it involved in this war?

Lord Lothian, in that last appeal to America, spoke of himself as representing "the people of a small island in the North Sea" (together with the outlying members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.) Again, this sentimental fact need not influence our decision. But it happens that this small island has been the home of, and over the centuries has nurtured, certain ideas which compose the living organism that we call civilization.

WHAT are these ideas? They are so familiar, we in America so take them for granted, that we have ceased to be aware how they arose, or even to identify them. They are inheritances, from a time beyond our memory. We accept them like the air we breathe, forgetting that once they had to be fought for, and may have to be fought for again. They include:

Parliamentary government—that is, government by a legislative body elected by the people.

Trial by jury.

Habeas corpus—the guaranty of every citizen against arbitrary seizure, his right to a hearing before a court.

The right to follow an occupation not imposed upon him by government; to earn, to save, to acquire property and be safeguarded in possession of it—to the end that the individual shall have a status independent of the state, and not be beholden to the state for existence.

The right to have a spiritual religion—that is, a religion other than the religion of state, and to be free in the exercise of what religion he chooses.

The right to speak his opinions, to voice his convictions or his interests, without suppression by government.

THERE ARE many others, including, in general, constant advance toward higher standards of what Lecky called morals, in the sense of steady abandonment of cruelty and ruthlessness, constant progress toward justice and kindness—man's slow stumbling toward Godliness.

As to all these factors of civilization, the point is that, in this war, every one of them is on one side. The negation of every one is on the other side. Every one of these things is on the side of England. The negation of every one of them is on the side of Hitler.

THIS PUTS the present war into the category of causes that are universal and timeless. Whether we should take sides in this war is not to be determined or influenced by the fact that our participation in past wars that England has fought have been for selfish national interests; nor by the fact that our participation in past wars may have had results or aspects not to our satisfaction. All that is immaterial here. Nothing is material here except that civilization is on one side, the negation of civilization on the other.

That we should help England is a clear duty to civilization. It is a responsibility before the highest tribunal one can know. The form and degree of the help is a matter of judgment and practicability.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

'Unfair' Victuals

WE HAD SOMETHING on the order of a contretemps in our city the other night, when a group of our long-word intellectuals sat down to fang chicken at one of our best hotels under the auspices of two of our butchers' paper magazines, to wit, The Nation, whose editor is Miss Freda Kirchway, and The New Republic, whose editor is Mr. Bruce Bliven (pronounced Blether, I believe).

I was not there, and I rely on the New York Times for my big general facts but avoid details because, for once, I am given to question the famous accuracy of that fine paper. The Times' lead began, "Four hundred readers of The Nation and The New Republic attended a dinner," etc., and I would not accept that figure without a certified circulation audit. For my own brother I wouldn't settle for more than 200 readers.

However, I think we may take it that such a dinner was given, that 400 persons attended, including the readers of both publications, and that Dr. Frank Kingdon announced, just before speaking, that they were gathered in a hotel which was on the "unfair list" of the New York Hotel Trades Council of the A. F. of L. This information had not been received, however, until too late to transfer the dinner elsewhere, and the announcement expressed regret that "we have helped to destroy union standards by patronizing a hotel on the unfair list."

NOW, THIS constituted a terrible problem of moral responsibility, and, as one who heard many grave discussions of a similar but, fortunately, purely hypothetical case in Loyola Academy, Chicago, I simply have to believe that the sponsors are guilty of a grievous multiple willful wrong.

It seems to have been agreed that it was wrong to crunch food in an "unfair" place and, according to my teaching, those who had been informed of the verboten were morally obliged to warn the other unsuspecting persons 'ere the first sip of sin-tainted tomato juice passed their innocent lips. Yet, by The Times' account, those who did know the facts calmly sat there, but with what inward agitation we can only suspect, and let the others err from, as it were, soup to nuts. Not knowing how many were in the know, I can't guess with any confidence how many offenses may be charged against each. But assuming—for a figure—that the two editors, Dr. Kingdon and, just for extra, one other were aware of the facts, we could say that each one sinned a hundredfold plus one apiece for their own premeditated partaking.

I JUST DON'T want to think of what William Green and Gangster George Browne, of the executive council of the A. F. of L., would say of this, but I do know that there have been other cases in which ordinary workingmen were cast out of the fold of the A. F. of L. and deprived of their living for less. Why, there was a man in Milwaukee whose wife bought milk for her baby from a certain "unfair" dairy because that dairy sold superior milk. Now the man's baby gets no milk at all because his union took up his card and got him fired because his wife crossed a picket line.

I would guess that Miss Kirchway and Mr. Bliven (pronounced Blether, I believe) could be fined a year's pay and thrown back to the bottom of the extra list of available union editors of intellectual butchers' paper magazines, at the very least. And Dr. Kingdon could be sent to teach kindergarten—as a substitute. This is no fooling matter, I assure you.

WHAT DO YOU suppose went on in the consciences (plural) of those who sat there watching all those others unsuspectingly chopping the heads off the canned asparagus with the sides of their forks and tossing them in? How do you suppose their own food tasted as they chatted away with a pretense of social unconcern? What do you suppose Harold Ickes' feelings were as that lovable old hard-shell union fundamentalist heard the awful news that he had just scoffed a program of "unfair" victuals? What if he was a guest? Do you suppose "unfair" food would taste any better to Mr. Ickes because it was free?—if it was. Well, there might be something in that, but who are we to say?

I read that the hotel man said it was all a mistake—that the hotel wasn't unfair. But that wouldn't abate the moral responsibility of those in the know who thought it was and admitted as much afterward.

Do you know what I think? I think these fine, horny-handed warriors in the class struggle are softening up. Too much tomato juice, too much half-fried chicken with the whisters on, too much demitasse and salted almonds, too much "Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen." It does something to the moral fiber.

Use Volunteers In Defense Tasks, Mrs. Davis Urges

Wider use of available volunteer workers in the national defense program was urged yesterday by Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, national director of Volunteer Services of the American Red Cross, in her annual report here at the conclusion of a two-day meeting.

She deplored reports that volunteers in Army cantonments are not to be used to the same extent as in 1917. "We read," she said, "that the WPA and the National Youth Administration may take, in many instances, the place of volunteers. I cannot help but feel that there is a place for both the trained social worker and for the trained volunteer," referring to such organizations as the Y. W. C. A., the Salvation Army, the Knights of Columbus, the Jewish Welfare and others.

10% Income Tax Proposed by Taft

Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, suggested yesterday that the first step in heavier taxes for defense should be to increase the normal levy on personal incomes from 4 per cent to 10 per cent. Taft added that a Federal sales tax should not be imposed until increased taxes on individuals had been tried.

"Taxes on business are passed on to the people," he continued, "but they tend to discourage business activity."

LORD BRYCE

Lothian And Bryce

Inevitably the comparison has cropped out in the references to Lord Lothian's death between Lord Lothian and Lord Bryce, but historians, I suggest, will put the late Ambassador in a class by himself among British ambassadors.

Certainly Lothian's knowledge of America and Americans was greater even than Lord Bryce's. I know this will sound strange, for Bryce is regarded as the greatest ambassadorial authority on the United States. His name is indissolubly linked with that exhaustive tome, "The American Commonwealth." However, Bryce's book was the product of many minds other than Bryce's scholarly one, and they were mainly American. The cloistered Bryce, as a matter of fact, was utterly without that living contact with run-of-the-road Americans which was the singular possession of Lord Lothian among all Britain's ambassadors. He didn't know America truly.

A story will show the relative limitations of Bryce in this respect. When in 1907 the simple James Bryce was appointed British Ambassador to Washington, and was asked whether he would accept a peerage, the great historian sought the counsel of that wise and witty American Ambassador, Joseph Choate. As a Briton Bryce was flattered by this evidence of his sovereign's favor, but felt that Americans wouldn't take kindly to it. He thought of the homespun Benjamin Franklin's mission as one to the British people as well as to the British Court. After all, Bryce, similarly, had undertaken his mission to both people and government. Choate, who didn't share Bryce's doubts about what Americans would think, but who felt that plain James Bryce would lose his identity in American eyes in some polysyllabic title, advised Bryce against accepting a peerage. Accordingly the author of "The American Commonwealth" waited till his mission was over before becoming, not Lord Tweedledee, as Choate imagined, but Lord Bryce.

Bryce's hesitation showed how largely theoretical was his knowledge of this country. The average American likes a foreigner to be himself, not to ape an American. As for a title, that would have been regarded as a compliment to the United States, even though a man who threw away a good name after making it honored, and took up the fancy name of the parish where he was born, might have been written down as wanting in self-respect. Undoubtedly a title is an asset to an Ambassador to Washington, and the more exalted, the better. And yet the ideal Ambassador must be a democrat if he intends to make any impression at all in the United States.

Lord Lothian met both requirements. The Marquess of Lothian had the most exalted title of any British Ambassador since the British in 1791, somewhat belatedly, sent their first representative to Washington. There have been one or two barons, but the late Ambassador was several steps beyond a barony, and only one remove from a Duke. Nevertheless Lord Lothian never wore his rank like a garment, as so many titled persons do; he didn't even wear his Britishry that way, as so many professional British diplomats (and expatriates) do. He was more democratic than any Ambassador in Anglo-American history—as democratic as Lord Bryce was aloof and august. His family name was Philip Kerr (pronounced Carr), and he was familiarly addressed as Philip by American friends from coast to coast.

Never did a man take more pains than he, indeed, to find out what Americans of all kinds were thinking. Bryce, in A. Lawrence Lowell's words, "set out to charm a people," but Lord Lothian, as he said in London just prior to his appointment, had already been charmed by the people. This was no empty rhetoric, either. Some diplomats never know the United States beyond a "set"; some think of themselves in exile; and the majority of them imagine their mission to consist merely of an opportunity to explain and represent their country. But Lord Lothian had already welded the United States into his religious and intellectual makeup. He was a Christian Scientist of American conversion—a deeply religious man who was so sectarian that he clung to the last to the Christian Scientist's aversion to doctors. And he was as fascinated as Bryce was by the constitutional origins of American unity.

Here was the great difference. Bryce set all those constitutional origins down in the classic "American Commonwealth." He remained the scholar—almost a public institution—who was never happier than when expounding American government, or any government, in the company of learned societies. Lothian had absorbed the American system so completely that it became to him the warp and woof of the next Europe. He wanted to see the United States adopted as a model, withal, because he was so passionately British that he felt there was no continuity for his country otherwise than in a federated family of nations. Lord Lothian, in short, was an "interpreter's house" all unto himself.

Imaginary Interview

Adolf—Hoch!

Wilhelm—Heil!

Adolf—Wilhelm, it's all right for you to quit Doorn and come back home.

Wilhelm—Is it an invitation or a command?

Adolf—An invitation. Germany rules the world! Germany is triumphant. Germany is unbeatable. Germany is . . .

Wilhelm—Stop mimicking me.

Adolf—I'm not mimicking you.

Wilhelm—Yes you are, even if you don't know it.

Adolf—All is forgiven. You will be welcomed back in Berlin.

Wilhelm—If it makes me as jittery as you act, I'm not sure I could stand it.

Adolf—I'm not jittery; I'm just excited.

Wilhelm—That's what I used to think.

Adolf—You've been here in Doorn more than 20 years. How terrible!

Wilhelm—You must go through it to appreciate a thing like that.

Wilhelm—Sorry.

Adolf—I am asking you to return to Berlin whenever you wish.

Wilhelm—Berlin, dear old Berlin. What a lovely city it WAS!

Adolf—Why the "WAS"?

Wilhelm—Oh, I hear it's changed a lot.

Adolf—You've been swallowing the stories of those R. A. F. raids.

Wilhelm—To think that once I led Germany in a great war, too.

Adolf—Stop boasting!

Wilhelm—I'm not boasting.

Adolf—Yes, you are. Remember, I was in your war, too.

Wilhelm—Why didn't you let me know?

Adolf—I was saving myself for the varsity.

Wilhelm—I can't look at you without marveling at what you've accomplished.

Adolf—Some warrior, eh?

Wilhelm—So far so good.

Adolf—I don't like the way you say that. Come on now, how about coming to Berlin?

Wilhelm—I think I'd rather stay here in Doorn.

Adolf—What! This is a terrible hole.

Wilhelm—Yah, but it looks the same every morning as it did the night before. That's something.

Adolf (disgusted with him)—I offer you a palace in Berlin and you say you would rather stay here away from everything.

Wilhelm—A place away from everything is hard to find today.

Adolf—What have you got here except a cottage and an old woodpile?

Wilhelm—Don't belittle that woodpile. It may come in handy some day.

Adolf—For whom?

Wilhelm—Who can tell?

In view of all the fuss about the visit of the duke and duchess to Miami Beach, you can't say that the publicity sent out by Joe Copps has no teeth in it.

Mussolini is shuffling generals because he doesn't like the way the war is "running."

Blase Benny, observing the Flying Carpet in "The Thief of Bagdad," was only mildly impressed. "Some performance!" remarked a friend. "Yeah, but I still think it's a last year's model," he yawned.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The New Position Of France

WHILE IT IS reasonably certain that the Italian offensive in this war has collapsed, it is still of course a very open question whether the British and the Greeks have sufficient power to win a complete decision in the Mediterranean. But they have proved how thoroughly right were the Frenchmen who wished to retire to Northern Africa and continue the war, how grossly mistaken and misled were the Frenchmen who brought about the capitulation of France. For with the help of the French forces in Africa and in Syria, with their excellent colonial army, their thousand airplanes and the French navy, the total defeat of Italy would now be assured.

The event has shown that a French government in Africa would be invulnerable to attack from the Axis powers. For if the British alone are in sight of being able to dominate the Mediterranean, the addition of the French navy would clinch the matter. The Italians, it is now evident, are quite incapable of getting at French Africa. Though the Germans might come down through Spain, the transportation of a German army from Spain to Africa would be no easy matter when the Straits of Gibraltar are covered by the Allied navies. In Africa the French have French territory which is readily defensible by land, sea, and air: a territory moreover with ports on the Atlantic Ocean through which supplies and reinforcements can be brought. For if the British can supply an army in Egypt by passing all the way around the Cape of Good Hope, the supplying of the French army in Africa would be a relatively simple matter.

WERE THE FRENCH resisting in Africa, the plight of the people in France proper would certainly be no worse than it is today, and in many respects it would be much better. For whereas today the French prisoners and the civilian population are helpless hostages in the hands of the Germans, a continuation of the war against Italy would mean that by this time an overwhelming Allied victory in the Mediterranean was in sight. This would complicate enormously the difficulty of the German occupation of France. Instead of a French government at Vichy which is the prisoner of Germany, there would be an independent French government on free French territory to which the French people would look for their liberation. There would not be the hideous confusion in which the oldest and firmest friends of France throughout the world do not know when they see a French diplomat or a French official whether he is friend or foe, and whether measures for the assistance of France are in the true interest of France or of her conqueror.

A month ago a reconsideration of the French decision to capitulate would have been like the opening of an old wound, the painful regretting of things that might have been. But that is no longer the case. The Allied victories in the Mediterranean have not only altered the whole position of France but they will inevitably induce and compel the French to reexamine their whole attitude towards the war. The fact that the Italian offensive is shattered and that Italy is knocked back on the defensive means that the French calculations and estimates of last June were fundamentally wrong. For while it seemed then that the whole of Greater France was in the clutches of the Axis power, it is now demonstrated that while continental France is invaded and occupied, the rest of France is still safe behind the Allied command of the sea and is therefore free, whenever Frenchmen decide that the time has come, to play a mighty part in the liberation of their country. The Greeks in Albania, the British at Taranto and in Egypt, have created a situation in which the Italians must reconsider their decision to enter the war and the French can and will reconsider their decision to capitulate.

WE SHALL NOT SEE the effects in tomorrow morning's headlines announcing a sudden, dramatic reversal of French and Italian policy. The consequences of a decisive battle are usually unfolded slowly. But if the offensive power of Italy in the Mediterranean is broken, it will indeed be true as Lord Lothian said in his last memorable speech that whereas the first half of 1940 was Hitler's, in the second half there is a very different situation. For though the offensive power of Hitler is tremendous and the British position very serious indeed, there is also great weakness in Hitler's position and the general outline of the scheme of his defeat is dimly visible in the distance. His weakness is, first, that it is within the power of the United States to render indecisive his assault on Great Britain. His weakness, second, is that he has no sound allies—what reliance can he put in Italy or in Russia?—and that all the peoples of Europe and America are in league against him. Thus the scheme of his defeat, like that of Napoleon, is to be strangled by sea power, deserted by his allies, resisted by the conquered peoples, and at last overwhelmed by a coalition which draws its strength from the whole encircling world.

The war today is a very different affair than it was last spring when it seemed that nothing could withstand Hitler's advance over the helpless, incompetent and outwitted democracies. For since then there has been a change, an obvious revival of the spiritual force of the free peoples and along with it a change in the quality of their leaders. All the world knows now that Mr. Winston Churchill, and the group of new men who surround him, have performed wonders in rallying the British people and all their friends.

But what should also be noted, though we are only beginning to see the first effects, is that in Winston Churchill there is for the first time a commander whose military experience is far wider than Hitler's and whose genius for war is at least as great.

THE ALLIES went into this war unprepared and under altogether inadequate leaders. The dominant French and British politicians were civilians who did not understand war, and at every turn for seven years they were outwitted by Hitler. For he is a man of genius, and ever since the last war he had been preparing himself for this war. The Allied leaders, including most of their generals, were no match for him.

But in Winston Churchill he has met his match. He has met a man who in theory and practice has devoted his life to the study of war, a man of whom there can be said what he himself has said about his great ancestor, the Duke of Marlborough, that "The success of a commander does not arise from following rules or models. It consists in an absolutely new comprehension of the dominant facts of the situation at the time, and all the forces at work. Cooks use recipes for dishes and doctors have prescriptions for diseases, but every operation of war is unique. The kind of intelligence capable of grasping in its complete integrity what is actually happening in the field is not taught by the tactics of commanders on one side or the other—though these may train the mind—but by a profound appreciation of the actual event."

This is a definition of genius by a man of genius—to be trained by experience but always to have a profound appreciation of the unique character of the actual event. At long last on the side of the democracies there is a commander of genius, and the effects begin to be discernible.

Congressmen Go To Florida to See About Fruit Fly

Millions of dollars damage allegedly wrought to fruit-growers by an insect-eradication campaign 11 years ago has resulted in an official trip to sunny Florida this chill month for six members of Congress.

Cause of the expedition—which may spend up to $10,000—is the Mediterranean fruit fly, which first appeared near Orlando, Florida, on April 6, 1929.

In eradicating the insect, employes of the Agriculture Department allegedly eradicated a great many other things, too, to an estimated total (including price losses) of $12,000,000.

The fruit fly hasn't reappeared.

This year, a joint Congressional investigating subcommittee was established. Members appointed were Senators Schwartz, of Wyoming; Ellender, of Louisiana, (Democrats), and Wiley, of Wisconsin (Republican); and Representative Ambrose Kennedy, of Maryland, and Ramspeck, of Georgia (Democrats), and Thomas, of New Jersey, (Republican). Hearings were begun in Florida last week and are scheduled to end next Tuesday.

The program has been arranged to show many of the stirring incidents in the early days of the United States, and raises the provocative question of what Thomas Jefferson would say and think of present-day America.

Meet John Kimbrough's Girl

She's Gloria Stephan, 18 years of blonde, blue-eyed beauty.

When John Kimbrough, 22-year-old All-American fullback of the Texas Aggies, plays against Fordham, Gloria will be in the Cotton Bowl cheering him on.

She looked at a picture of Kimbrough a Post photographer gave her yesterday, denied that they were engaged. But Gloria was on hand Thursday night to meet the handsome football hero when his plane to New York landed at Washington Airport.

"John called me (from College Station, Tex., to Holton Arms girls' school here) and said he would be here. He's going to call me again tonight from New York," she said yesterday.

Kimbrough's plane was grounded at the airport by bad weather. This placed Gloria on his schedule until shortly before he boarded a train for the Big City to see the sights and find out what the American Football League Yankees had to offer.

Gloria and John met a year ago in Biyam, Tex., her home town. She attended Hockaday, a school in Dallas. She insisted that there was no romance between them. Then said that she was flying home December 20 for Christmas holidays and that she would meet John at the airport in Dallas.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Asks Whether to See, or Reply to Letter From, Man Who Discharged Her Years Ago Because He Loved Her and Was Married

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should very much appreciate your advice on a matter which has been troubling me for some time. Here is the story: About 12 years ago, I fell very much in love with a man for whom I worked. I never made the fact known to anyone, not even the man, because he was married,—although I happened to know that he and his wife did not get along well together.

One day, apparently in a "blue mood," he surprised me by confessing his love for me. At the same time, he asked me to get another position because, he said, he couldn't stand the strain of being around me and keeping "hands off." He went on to say that he recognized his obligation to another; that he could not and would not change the status quo because, while he had not got along with his wife for several years, still he realized he had no grounds for divorce; and, moreover, he had no intention of walking out on her, after having promised to protect and provide for her, etc. They had no children.

I came to Washington and found a position. It has been all of eight years since we have seen each other, and in that time I have heard of or from him, indirectly, probably half a dozen times. On my birthday, last September, I was completely taken by surprise by a long and subtly affectionate letter from him (I still don't know how he learned my address), in which he recalled "the good old days," (as he called them), when we had worked together. He went on to say that he had never had a finer secretary,—or one whom he'd be as unable to forget. He said he might be in Washington soon,—or not so soon,—and that if he did come, he would like to see me.

He said nothing about his marital status and, oddly enough, didn't ask me to write him. He is prominent in business and social circles and so far as I know, has never done anything dishonorable, anything that would reflect ever so slightly upon his reputation or anyone else's. Therefore, I cannot understand his letter and I don't know what to do about it.

I wrote to some of my friends there, and very casually inquired about him,—hoping I might get some "lead" on his present set-up. One friend replied that, in her opinion, it certainly was a shame about Mr. Blank; because he was such a fine person, and how he managed to stand that wife of his, she didn't know. She said his wife was openly having affairs with other men, and rumor had it that, at long last, they were on the verge of divorce.

As far as I'm concerned, there never has been any other man for whom I've cared as much. And, frankly, I should be very happy to renew our acquaintance if it could be done openly, without harmful effects to anyone, myself included.

I can't quite understand his letter. It so obviously contained hidden feelings, but didn't in any way explain his present position or make clear whether it would (or would not) be all right for me to see him if he should come to Washington. Maybe I'm making a mountain out of a molehill. But I want to do the right thing, without cheating myself out of anything—if you could call it that. I'd appreciate an early reply, because if I answer his letter at all, I'd like to make it a Christmas note. N. W. K.

Behaving With Poise In the Circumstances

DEAR N. W. K.: Since the man appears to be "the soul of discretion"—as well as of honor—whereas his wife seems to be petty, selfish and somewhat unscrupulous, it probably would be undiplomatic to acknowledge his letter with a friendly, discursive reply-in-kind. Such a reply, if indited and mailed with the kindliest, or most innocent, motives in the world—might fall into his wife's hands and be vengefully (or defensively) used by her for the purpose of making his life even more uncomfortable than she has made it, thus far.

However, there is no reason why you shouldn't send him a "Christmas note,"—which is to say, a friendly message penned on a folder-type Christmas card designed for that very purpose. Without making,—or even implying,—any reference to his birthday letter, you could write something to the effect that you trust all goes well with him; that you hope he is hale and successful, as ever; and that it would be pleasant to see him and talk over old times with him, if ever he is in Washington, a city you love, and that must be seen to be appreciated.

He would understand, of course, that you had received his birthday message and would consent to see him if he came to town. Because, again, there is no reason why you shouldn't lunch or dine with him, openly and casually, at one of the more famous restaurants here—supposing opportunity to do so should arise. Whether he is happily married, unhappily married, on the verge of divorce, or in process of being divorced—such aspects as these of his personal life would constitute no ethical or conventional deterrent to his "breaking bread" with you when in your vicinity.

As for what the man's letter "means"—it means, to me, that you loom as large in his thoughts today as you did when he asked you to go away, for mutually protective reasons. It may also mean that he sees the handwriting on the wall, so far as his marriage is concerned; that he has reason to believe his wife may take the initiative, sooner or later, in dissolving the contract; and that he is sending out a "feeler" in your direction, to learn whether you still care as much for him as he believed you once did. It may mean, in brief, that after 12 (or is it 8) years of loving you without hope, he now sees straws-in-the-wind which indicate he may one day be free to ask you to marry him. M. H.

'Back to Normal' Living Trend Reflected in Perfume Tastes

Woodsy, Outdoor Scents Now Popular, Says Expert; Tells of Preferences Of Duchesses of Windsor and Kent

By Carolyn Abbott

GRANDMA dobbed on violet or carnation perfume, regardless of how fragile or domineering she happened to be. Mama did the same. Flapper sister doused herself from head to toe with only the most exotic and sensuous odors. Today, however, the custom is to choose your perfume to harmonize with your personality and the general tendency toward the woodsy, outdoor perfumes—expressive of a normal trend in living.

This is the observation of Robert Goulding, international authority on perfume, who stopped over in Washington recently en route to Florida. Mr. Goulding knows whereof he speaks, for he has traveled all over the world and has sold perfume to diplomatic wives, the Duchess of Kent, Lady Louis Mountebatten and even the Duchess of Windsor.

The Duches of Windsor may have changed her perfume by now, but in 1936, prior to Edward's abdication, her favorite was the heady, sophisticated odor.

"A sophisticated odor is in keeping with the Duchess' cosmopolitan personality, so her choice was perfect," he pointed out.

Scents Suit Types

Other famous women in social and professional circles in all parts of the world choose perfume to suit their types. In Great Britain, for instance, where Mr. Goulding has lived for the last five years, Lady Mountebatten, an intermediate type — neither light nor dark—likes the new woodsy odors and the faint floral scents. Her first choice is "Crepe de Chine."

The Duchess of Kent's favorite perfume is "Molyneaux No. 5." "As a rule," said Mr. Goulding, "English women like floral types. And it is safe to say that light perfumes are suitable to all Anglo-Saxon women."

Orientals and the dark Latin types lean toward the provocative types of perfumes such as "Christmas Night." In South America women there rightly choose the heavy perfumes made from deer musk and probably Abyssinian cat. It would be entirely out of keeping with the Latin woman's personality to wear a light, floral fragrance.

Back to Normal Trend

Mr. Goulding thinks that the present trend toward the woodsy, outdoor perfumes such as pine, "Yankee Clover," "Straw Hat" and spicy odors like "Friendship Garden" of special significance. For they point to a more normal and balanced way of living. Specifically, it shows a decline in restlessness and indecision that predominated among women everywhere a few years ago. This return to the simple, wholesome perfumes indicates that women are striking their stride in individuality and a natural mode of living.

From the wilds of Borneo to the formal Court of St. James women the world over share one great love. The love is perfume. Even the savage maiden who has never heard the word eau de cologne annoints her body with the essence extracted from herbs and flowers. Yet, to be effective, it must be chosen with great care—else it will be meaningless, according to Mr. Goulding.

South American Influence

With the international accent on South America, we're hearing more about that provocative continent in the decorative arts too. It seems that Argentina at least has a preference for the old French styles and almost no interest in modern furniture. Buenos Aires has been getting most of her chairs from Europe and now that the war has cut off imports the whole Argentine is worried about how long they're going to be sitting pretty. For chairs from the U. S. A. are too expensive for them. They'll probably end up making their own.

'All-American' Clothes Show No Freak Style

American designers wholly on their own at last are not going to thrust any freak or extreme "native" fashions on the American woman. This was assured yesterday at the preview of American designed clothes held at the fashion show for the benefit of the British-American Ambulance Corps at the Shoreham Hotel.

While bright colors predominated, especially the patriotic red, white and blues, the general color note was one of restraint. Florence Reichman, noted designer of millinery, who announced the show, pointed out that women were stealing men's thunder in dress, especially in the new eased shoulder treatment. She mentioned that capes, which have a masculine origin, were definitely coming to the fore.

Skirts are not as full as they have formerly been or as straight they are said to be, according to Miss Reichman. In other words, a becoming harmony has been reached by an easy fullness in plain skirts, with pleats being a covered diversion.

Basic Black Dress

The basic black dress of which Miss Reichman is an exponent, figured in the show relieved by jewelry or bright colored accessories. Among the new trends discussed by the designer was the apron effect at the front of dresses either in print or plain fabric. In furs, leopard is still the cry, she said.

As a special toast to individualists who shy away from extreme hair styles, Miss Reichman stressed that women should wear their hair becomingly and the way they want to wear it. "The important thing is that it be beautifully done, with perhaps a bit of a sweep at the side," she said. In her shop she shows a woman the hat that is becoming to the way she wears her hair, not a hat that requires a special type hair-do to look well on the person.

A Woman's Washington

By JEAN BROWNELL

JULIAN HUXLEY was "drawing out" his neighbor at a London dinner party. Suddenly he rose and, striding completely around the table, shouted, "But this must be written! This must be written!" Now in Washington, Mrs. Lella Florence admits that things do happen to her—so fast she never has time to chronicle them. Last spring, for instance, the American-born journalist left her home in Birmingham, England, and went with her professor-husband to Egypt, where she wrote some articles for The Birmingham Post. They planned to return after six weeks, but Italy's entry into the war interrupted all transportation. They ended up by taking a train to Palestine and catching a boat to America, which they had had no idea of visiting just then. Once here, she arranged to become English correspondent for The Nation and The New Republic—if the State Department will let her go back home.

A native of Michigan, Mrs. Florence launched her adventure-filled career when she went West and, exaggerating her age slightly, secured what she thinks was the last homestead left in Washington. "I spent two years plowing fields and rounding up cattle," she says, "then went to work for a newspaper; my first big thrill was the Ford Peace Ship expedition." After her return she worked for Bruce Barton on "Every Week," then married a young Cambridge don studying here and went back to England with him. . . . The articles on Egypt? "Oh, yes—the boat taking them to Birmingham went to the bottom—and I made no carbons."

Making her preparations for Thanksgiving, a Washington housewife discovered that her roaster, long unused, contained several slices of turkey in bad repair. She knew she hadn't left them there, and finally traced them to a neighbor who had borrowed the pan some months ago. The woman apparently accepted the old-fashioned school's belief that it's ungrateful to borrow a utensil and return it empty.

Strong, Well Cared for Feet, Aid to Christmas Shopper

By Ida Jean Kain

YOUR FEET are the real underdogs in the anatomical scheme of things at any time, but especially at this season when feminine curiosity impels you to trudge through miles of shop aisles "just looking, thank you" before you land in the bedroom slipper section, convinced there isn't any Santa!

For foot aid, take contrast baths as soon as you get home. Place the feet in hot water for a minute or two, then in cold. Or, better still, sit on the edge of the bathtub with the feet under the tap and let the water run over them full force, alternating hot and cold.

To further stimulate the circulation, use plenty of soap and a good stiff brush, scrubbing vigorously. Dry with a turkish towel.

If you have a few spare minutes, relax with the feet propped up or take foot massage. Use both hands and place the thumbs on the foot with the fingers above the instep and work along the arch with firm, gentle strokes. Give each toe its turn, stretching and pulling.

Feet Need Plenty Of Exercise

You might think—if you thought about it at all—that your feet get enough exercise. But what they get is too much work! They need exercise. Stand on a towel and grip with the toes to pick up folds of it. Or sit on a chair and pick up marbles in the toes, crossing the foot over the other knee and dropping the objects in the hand. Another good exercise is the grip walk. Step forward with one foot, weight on the outer borders and, as the weight is brought forward, grip strongly with the advanced foot. Relax, and as the other foot is brought forward, grip with it.

If your feet are killing you while you are downtown, but you must get your shopping done, stop and have a little foot massage. Or have 30 minutes of body massage—the masseur knows that relaxation depends on your feet, and she will spend a good portion of her time on your crippled transportation service.

Christmas shopping shoes should always have a comfortable walking heel. The fit at the heel should be snug to prevent slipping up and down and roomy at the toe so the toes can spread out while you walk. There should be a good half-inch of space between toes and toe of the shoes. The same extra toe room should be allowed in stockings.

Leiter-Clagett Nuptials Arrangements Made

Mrs. McConihe to Be Matron of Honor at Event Scheduled for Feb. 22; Marriage Will Be Solemnized at Mrs. Leiter's Home

By Dudley Harmon

LET'S TURN from harassed diplomats and famous refugees, who have been holding the spotlight lately, to the doings of Washington residents in general and to a subject as cheerful as a wedding in particular.

Plans for the most important such ceremony of the season have just been completed by the two principals, Miss Nancy Leiter and Thomas Clagett. The wedding will take place at the home of Mrs. Joseph Leiter on Dupont Circle and a reception will follow. The date, as announced earlier, is Saturday, February 22.

The prospective bride has chosen as her matron of honor Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, the former Miss Marguerite Hagner. Miss Leiter was a bridesmaid at the latter's wedding to Mr. McConihe several years ago. Randall Hagner, Mrs. McConihe's younger brother, will be an usher for Mr. Clagett.

Miss Audrey Campbell, first cousin of Miss Leiter, and Miss Elizabeth Clagett, sister of the bridegroom-elect, will be the bride's only other attendants. Miss Campbell is the daughter of the late Mrs. Colin Campbell, for whom Nancy Leiter was named. The late Mrs. Campbell also held her wedding reception at the big stone house on Dupont Circle, and, like her niece and namesake Nancy, made her debut there.

Thomas Leiter, brother of the prospective bride, who divides his time between Washington and the Virginia hunt country, will give his sister in marriage. She is the daughter of the late Joseph Leiter.

James Wimsatt To Be Best Man

Mr. Clagett has chosen as his best man James Wimsatt of Washington. In addition to Mr. Hagner, his ushers will be James Mitchell and John and Duncan Pitney of this city and Samuel D. Foster of Annapolis.

As both Miss Leiter and her fiance have many connections in Washington, their wedding is one of the most outstanding of the season. Numerous parties will be given for them, though dates have not yet been set.

One friend who hopes to entertain in honor of the couple during the Christmas holidays is Miss Angelica Lloyd, debutante daughter of Mrs. Demarest Lloyd. Both she and Miss Leiter made their debuts the same season. Miss Lloyd is studynig in Boston this winter but will come down a week from today to spend Christmas with her mother.

In Boston, Miss Lloyd is making her home with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Porter and their family. In addition to studying music she is taking a course in government at Radcliffe College. The Lloyds have a summer home at New Bedford, Mass., from which Mrs. Lloyd has just returned after six months.

Many Dinners Before Friday Dance

Miss Leiter and Mr. Clagett were among the guests last evening at the fourth meeting this season of the Friday Supper Club at the Sulgrave. Many dinners preceded the party, and both young people and their elders danced until the small hours.

Among the dinner hosts were Mrs. Sidney Lee, and James Mitchell, who entertained at the home of his parents, Dr. and Mrs. James F. Mitchell.

William Fitzgerald gave a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of Miss Ellen Flowerree, who will leave on Wednesday for her home in New Orleans. Other in the company included Miss Edith Wright, Miss Billie Byrd West, Miss Mary Flowerree of Baltimore, a cousin of the guest of honor, who is spending the week-end with her; Miss Jean Branieff, Bus Hammond, Miss Josephine Boyle, Bradner Smith and Jose de Lasa of the Cuban Embassy.

Miss Flowerree wore a dinner dress of black velvet made with a full skirt of pink taffeta.

Among the many others glimpsed at the Sulgrave Club dance were Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Morgan, Clarence Hewes and Griffith Warfield.

Knoxes Are Hosts To Illinoisans

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox have as their guests at the Wardman Park Hotel over the week-end Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Bard, of Highland Park, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Rawleigh Warner, of Winnetka, Ill., and Mrs. Knox's sister, Miss Adelia Reid, of Manchester, N. H.

Tomorrow Secretary and Mrs. Knox will take their guests on a cruise down the Potomac aboard the Sequoia. Mr. and Mrs. Bard's daughter, Katherine, will accompany them.

Dinners Given For Diplomats

Several dinners in official and residential circles marked the social calendar in the Capital last evening.

Among the hosts were the Charge d'Affaires of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Gazitua, who entertained at their residence, and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Eugene Villaret, who feted Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet at a small dinner.

Guests of Senor and Senora de Gazitua were the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, the Nicaraguan envoy and Senora de De Bayle and the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres.

The Greek Minister, Cimon P. Diamantopoulous, was the ranking guest at the Villaret dinner. Others included Gen. and Mrs. Richard Jordan and Lady Monson, of London, who is here with her three children. Lady Monson's home has been bombed, according to word from the British capital.

Party Is Held Despite Absence Of Honor Guest

Although the guest of honor was on an east-bound train, a merry dinner party planned for Miss Joan Kindelberger went on anyway at the Shoreham last evening.

Miss Kindelberger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Kindelberger, of Brentwood Park, Los Angeles, Calif., is expected today. Her plane was grounded outside of Nashville and she was forced to board a train—thus breaking her date. She will be the guest of Mrs. Leland Taylor, who last night entertained at a party of young people. On Tuesday she will give a tea for her young guest. On December 21, Mrs. J. Marcellus Woodard will entertain at a dinner dance at the Army and Navy Country Club for the California visitor.

Attending the party last evening were Miss Patricia Grady, Miss Yvonne Perrin, Miss Florence Fisher, Miss Helen Louise Carrow, Miss Laura Belle Wyatt and Miss Jane Wyatt. The young men attending were Reginald Grady, Richard Moran, James Dickey, Gordon Moody, G. B. Seibold and James Leighton.

Miss Ashby Wilson And Dr. Schulze Are Married

Miss Ashby Ann Winslow, of Wheeling, W. Va., and Dr. Gustave H. Schulze, jr., were married yesterday in the Methodist Church in Bethesda, Md.

Miss Richardson Will Be Honored

Mrs. Milton R. Lockwood will entertain at breakfast Sunday, December 22, at her home, Lock Woods, in honor of Miss Phyllis Walke Richardson, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dawson Richardson.

A tea in honor of Miss Richardson will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Clayton on Sunday, December 29.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

TWO famous beauties are visiting or settling down at Llangollen, the estate of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Whitney, in the hunt country.

Mrs. Whitney is in Philadelphia, where she was called by the sudden death of her father, "Lem" Altemus, noted horseman and sportsman.

Mrs. St. George Duke of Tuxedo Park, formerly Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke is a guest as Llangollen for this week. She is keeping several horses in Warrenton and is hunting with the Virginia packs.

Mrs. William Fiske, the former Rose Bingham, English beauty, is also at Llangollen. Mrs. Fiske is the widow of William Fiske of New York, who was the first American killed in action during this war. Envoy Tells Confidence In Greeks

Italians Are Already Disorganized, Says Dr. Diamantopoulos Before Press Women

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
Post Club Editor

"We are confident that we'll stand," the Minister of Greece, Cimon P. Diamantopoulos, told members of the Women's National Press Club yesterday, addressing them at the luncheon given in his honor at the Willard Hotel.

Asked how the Greek forces would hold out in the event big reinforcements were sent from Italy, he replied "that is an eventuality with which we have to reckon but which I do not think we have to fear."

He cited as reasons for his confidence the fact that the Italian forces are already greatly disorganized; that there are only three ports in Albania where troops can be easily landed, Durazzo, Valona, which Greece is now approaching, and "what, until last week, was called Porta Edda;" and the fact that Albania is a country of marshes and mountains.

Familiar with the country, having been minister there three years, Mr. Diamantopoulos said the roads were few, not good or wide and it was not a country where large forces could be deployed.

"I think we shall be able to take it and keep it," he said.

The problem of lines of communications, which has concerned writers in the American press, is not as important with the Greeks as with many fighting forces, said the minister. Bread, olives and tinned sardines constitute their principle food supplies, he said, and few if any mobile kitchens are required.

In response to a question as to how the Greeks could be so well prepared to defend themselves while giving the general impression that they were unprepared, Mr. Daimantopoulos pointed out that the Italian invasion of Albania in 1938 was regarded as a definite threat to the freedom of Greece. While his country could not prepare to make war against a strong power like Italy, he said, with no tanks and no air force, it did organize to defend itself.

The Italians, said the Minister, "consider the hand-to-hand fighting anachronistic and they don't like it, according to reports in the Italian papers, but we don't care if it is old-fashioned, we are bound to do it."

Mr. Diamantopoulos expressed the gratitude of his people for the aid and encouragement received from this country. From the time the war started, he said, the American Red Cross "has been wonderful." "In money it is nearly $30,000," he said. "If this sum is not so important for America it is marvelous in Greece."

The exchange of letters between President Roosevelt and King George of Greece has been the best manifestation of friendly feeling between the two countries, he said, and the warm spirit of President Roosevelt's reply has contributed much encouragement to the whole Greek people, especially to the fighting forces, he said.

Recalling that in 1821 Greece won her freedom from the yoke of Turkey after five centuries, he declared, "This war has been imposed on us by a big and mighty neighbor who thought its future lay in conquest, who thought it easy to extend its hand and get Greece under its yoke. Now we are fighting on our own territory—Albania—against overwhelming odds and we drive back the enemy since six weeks. The deep interest of the American people is explained by the fact that we fight for the same ideas that base your national life and thinking—we fight for freedom."

Among the guests at the head table with the Greek Minister and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, the club president, who introduced him, were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; C. Nicolayevitch, a Yugoslav engineer, here on a special mission and attached temporarily to the Yugoslav Legation; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board; Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, Mrs. May Thomson Evans, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay and Mrs. Finnis Garrett.

20th Century Club Hears Caroline Hood

All of the sections of the Twentieth Century Club joined in attending a program sponsored yesterday afternoon by the art section in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. It was addressed by Miss Caroline Hood, "flying ambassadress" of Rockefeller Center, New York, and was the last meeting of the club until after the holidays.

Miss Hood, who is a niece of the late Raymond Hood, one of the architects of Rockefeller Center, told the history of the "city within a city" from before the definite plan was conceived by the Rockefellers.

Delar Photo.
CAROLINE HOOD

Originally, she said, they had expected to build a new Metropolitan Opera House and leased the 12 acres from Columbia University for 75 years for the purpose. This idea was abandoned after the depression and Rockefeller Center designed instead. There are all kinds of activities there, she said, describing them and showing colored slides. Like a city in itself, it has 25,000 employes and 125,000 persons go through its doors daily, she said.

She had among her pictures one of the Elgin Botanic Gardens, which stood on the site 100 years ago.

Her descriptions included the Radio City Music Hall, the broadcasting studios, the Museum of Modern Art and the annual Christmas celebration with the 80-foot tree.

Mrs. Stephen Olop, chairman of the garden section of the club, introduced the speaker. Mrs. Harold Fowler, chairman of the art section, arranged the program and also a luncheon in Miss Hood's honor, for board members and section heads at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women.

Sculptor Displays Art To Alliance

Doris Eaton Mason Uses Mrs. Campbell As Model in Exhibit

Mrs. George Campbell posed yesterday for the head modeled by Doris Eaton Mason as she lectured before the Women's Alliance of All Souls Church (Unitrian).

Mrs. Mason, who is spending several weeks in Washington, has just returned from a lecture tour that took her to the Pacific Coast. At the beginning of her talk, she displayed the clay model of the head of a member of the audience at her last lecture. This she began "taking down" to the accompaniment of little gasps of dismay from the spectators as she destroyed the finely molded features.

As she did so, she explained the various facial muscles and their part in forming the contour. When these features had been removed, there remained the skull on which she began the work of building up the likeness of Mrs. Campbell. She selected her from yesterday's audience as the model.

Mrs. Mason wore a red satin smock and worked rapidly as she talked. She explained the difference between the different methods of sculpture—the French pellet method in which the form is built up on the armature with little pellets of clay; the geometric method in which the head is divided imaginatively into four sections with the nose and ears forming an imaginary axis, running horizontally and the method of cutting down a large piece of clay.

The geometric method was used by Saint-Gaudens, she said the first commission for a portrait bust he ever received. This bust, she added, was of seven-year-old Frederick Torrey (now Dr. Torrey of Georgetown) and is still in his possession.

Imagination, vision and knowledge of anatomy are all required in the art of sculpture, said Mrs. Mason, in order to give life to the stone or clay.

She contrasted the size of the first bronze statue ever cast in the United States—that of Jackson by Clark Mills, which stands facing the White House, with that of the largest single piece of bronze ever cast in the world, the Figures of the Republic by Oscar Hansen, at Boulder Dam. She likewise contrasted the size of the first stone carving in this country, Horatio Greenough's "Washington" now in the Smithsonian, done in a 12 cubic foot piece of marble, and called heroic size, with the great Gutzon Borglum carving on Mount Rushmore.

Hit-Run Autos Injure Four Here in Day

Six Others Hurt In Traffic Mishaps On Rain-Slick Streets

Ten persons were injured here yesterday on rain-slick streets, four of them by hit-run motorists.

Sixty-three-year-old Victor Galotta, of 1410 N Street Northwest, was struck down in front of his home by a car that sped away, and was taken to Emergency Hospital with a fractured pelvis and head injuries. Similarly hit was Gabriel Lower, 56, of 1207 Twenty-second Street Northwest, who was treated for a fractured left leg at Emergency Hospital. The accident occurred at Connecticut Avenue and Bancroft Street Northwest.

Woman Hurt in Crash

May Riemer, 42, of 3817 M Street Northwest, passenger in an auto driven by Harry L. Becraft, of 3106 M Street Northwest, suffered injuries when the auto collided with another, which drove off, according to police.

Police charged Joseph Green, 43, of Oxon Hill, Md., with leaving the scene after colliding following an accident in which Charlotte McLeod, 42, of 1387 Rittenhouse Street Northwest, was hurt. She was taken to Garfield Hospital. Operator of the car in which she was riding was Edward F. Amorosi, 32, of 528 Tenth Street Northeast. The accident scene was Thirteenth and U Streets Northwest.

Critically injured, police said, when run down as he was attempting to repair a street car track at M Street and Key Bridge, William H. Rhodes, 40, of Arlington, a street car inspector, was taken to Georgetown Hospital. He was found to have a fractured right leg, fractured skull and internal injuries. Walter T. Weaver, 25, of 1619 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, was said by police to be the operator of the auto and was charged with driving while drunk.

Motorcyclist Hurt

When his motorcycle crashed with an automobile in the 5300 block of Georgia Avenue Northwest, Robert Cohen, 19, of Silver Spring, was rushed to Casualty Hospital. The automobile, police said, was driven by Francis E. McMahon, 4208 Third Street Northwest.

John L. Walarick, 9, of 1926 M Street Northwest, suffered a skull fracture and was taken to Emergency Hospital after he had been hit by a truck which police listed as being operated by Louis Pipitone, 27, of Baltimore. The accident occurred at Twenty-first and M Streets Northwest.

Eight-year-old Benjamin Goston, colored, of 207 Twelfth Street Northeast, sustained head injuries when an auto struck him at 1100 B Street Northeast. The motorist, according to police, was Robert H. Grant, of 411 Eleventh Street Northeast.

An auto operated by Dillard O. Burch, 42, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and a milk truck driven by Joseph C. Chesser, 29, of 2520 L Street Northwest, collided at Twenty-second Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Chesser was taken to Emergency Hospital with back injuries.

Norman M. Barbour, 31, of 1722 Lyman Place Northeast, received fractured ribs and possible internal injuries yesterday when a truck he was driving collided with a car at Forty-fourth and Warren Streets Northwest. He was treated at Georgetown Hospital.

A coroner's jury yesterday held William H. Myerly, 49, of 22 Sixteenth Street Southeast, for Police Court action under the Negligent Homicide Act after an inquest into a recent traffic accident.

A short time before the hearing, police were notified of the District's seventieth traffic fatality—a 54-year-old colored man who died at Gallinger Hospital Thursday.

Myerly's automobile struck and killed Robert M. Lancaster, 21, of 1429 B Street Northeast, at Tenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, November 14.

Lancaster's companion, Annie B. Watson, 21, of the B Street address, was seriously injured. Se is now recuperating at Casualty Hospital.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said the death of John Bridgeport, 54, colored, of 820 Forty-eighth Place Northeast, was due to injuries suffered when he was knocked down at Forty-ninth Street and Deane Avenue Northeast, December 7.

Alfred D. McMillian, 40, of Seat Pleasant, Md., was said by police to have driven the car which struck Bridgeport.

Plenty of Police Handy At All-Police Mishap

Police scout car, No. 111, did not respond to a traffic accident in the 2500 block Nichols Avenue Southeast, as ordered yesterday morning. It not only was there, it was in the accident.

And to make matters worse, Policeman William D. Harvey, 25, of 16 Hawaii Avenue Northeast, was driving the other vehicle—a Police Department motorcycle.

The patrol car was making a routine visit to the Barry Farms Playground and was making a right turn when Harvey, following, crashed against the rear of the car. He suffered injuries to his right knee.

The scout car was manned by Privates O. L. Curtis, driver, and V. W. Weaver, observer, both of the Eleventh Precinct.

To complete the picture an accident prevention squad cruiser investigated the mishap.

Yule Fun and Defense Pleas Mix at Businessmen's Party

Christmas Tree at Pennsylvania Ave. And 21st St. Lighted; Then Col. Mann Appeals for Volunteers in Guard Unit

Christmas merriment and the sharper note of national defense were mixed last night to fix the theme of the annual yule parade and party staged by the West End Businessmen's Association.

The spirit of Christmas winked brightly from the red, green and yellow lights of a slender 30-foot cedar tree at Pennsylvania Avenue and Twenty-first Street Northwest, set aglow at the height of the ceremony.

Overhead the needle beams of the District National Guard's air defense searchlights played against a background of low hanging clouds.

Hundreds Brave Rain

To several hundred persons who braved the chilly evening and light rain, Charles L. Norris, president of the West End Businessmen, said briefly that the celebration had been arranged to "wish you a Merry Christmas and to rejoice with you in the thought that in this land of ours we have peace and prosperity." These wishes were seconded by Louis Bowdler, president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations.

A moment later, defense took the stage. Col. Leroy S. Mann, commander of the 260th Coast Artillery, told the crowd that his National Guard outfit was starting January 7 for a year's training in Texas.

Sign Before January 5

"We still have vacancies," said Col. Mann, "and we'd like to see a few more men come down from this end of town and take the trip with us."

He explained that volunteers had to sign up before January 5, at the recruiting stations at Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest or Maine Avenue and O Street Southwest.

Climax of the ceremonies came with the singing of "God Bless America," and a moment later, as the crowd scattered, Christmas chimes came pealing through the loudspeakers.

The parade, headed by troops of Col. Mann's Coast Artillery with their band, marched nearly half an hour, from Twenty-first and K Streets in a loop around through Twenty-second, F and Eighteenth Streets, and west along Pennsylvania Avenue.

John C. Marceron, of 2040 I Street Northwest, parade marshal, marched with two attractive assistant marshals, his daughter, Norma, 17, and the latter's friend, Miss Marie Heirl, 18, of 817 Twenty-first Street Northwest.

5,000 Watch Parade

Santa Claus, in private life Roy E. Singleton, 50-year-old Postoffice clerk of 4033 Twenty-second Street Northeast, danced along the parade route behind the Elks Boys Band, to the delight of a crowd estimated by police at about 5,000 persons.

Prize cup winners in the parade were:

Bands: Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy Band, first; Elks Boys Band, second, and Holy Comforter Boys Band, third. Best marchers: the Equality Walter Reed Post Drum Corps. Best float: Chesapeake Plate Glass Co.; with Heurich Brewery and Laura's Beauty Shoppe, receiving honorable mention.

Citizens Plan To Dedicate Coolidge High

Brightwood Meeting Schedules Event For March 22

Ignoring superstition, members of the Brightwood Citizens Association at their Friday-the-thirteenth meeting last night, laid plans for the dedication March 22—13 weeks from today—of the Calvin Coolidge High School, at, Fifth and Sheridan Streets Northwest.

The association, one of ten civic and business organizations sponsoring the dedication, set aside $10 to meet expected costs.

Elmer Johnson was appointed by President Charles W. Ray to head a special committee which will seek to have the postoffice at Georgia Avenue and Concord Avenue Northwest improved to meet the Christmas mail rush.

The annual Christmas tree contest sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club and the Federation of Citizens Associations was announced and members urged to enter their outdoor tree applications before the December 23 deadline.

Members voted to back the District Commissioners' efforts to ferret out nonreligious property in the city which is not being taxed at present, allegedly amounting to more than $2,000,000; to send their thanks to Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, for his services for the District and their area, and to send Christmas greetings to Member William McK. Clayton.

They reiterated their opposition to the slaughterhouse in the rear of 813 Kennedy Street Northwest, and to the proposed dance hall at Ninth and Kennedy Streets Northwest.

New members admitted into the association last night were Mrs. Page Steiner, Mrs. Ada Mae Clements and Walter Chadwick.

Technicolor Film Shows Traffic Shots

Wider use of transit facilities to downtown areas as a means of eliminating traffic congestion is illustrated in a technicolor short soon to be exhibited among citizens' associations by the Capital Transit Company.

Yesterday a group of civic, business and municipal government representatives previewed the film, entitled "People Come First", in the auditorium of the Potomac Electric Power Company building, as guests of E. D. Merrill, president of the transit firm.

Among those present were Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, Fire Chief S. T. Porter; John Nolen, jr., of the Park and Planning Commission; Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer; A. W. Crossley and Fred A. Sager of the Public Utilities Commission; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; and E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel.

Separation Still Worries King Family

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

The dilemma of separation appears to linger under the roof of Robert E. King, now of 3038 O Street Northwest.

Mrs. Stageberg

On December 3, he was united with his daughter, Mrs. Lola Stageberg, of Denver, Colo., whom he had never seen, and there ended, the King family hoped, the separation of father and daughter.

But, in going to New York to meet her father, Mrs. Stageberg was compelled to leave her husband behind. Now in Washington, she is reluctant to remain longer away from her husband, but feels an equal reluctance to leave her father whom she has seen and known for so little time.

The upshot of the situation—one in which she finds herself drawn between two cities 1,800 miles apart—was to send to her husband, A. Victor Stageberg, the railroad ticket which was to have taken her back to him in Denver.

Stageberg is coming here, arriving possibly next Friday. Then the whole family will be together for once—but not without the threat of separation still.

Stageberg

If Stageberg, who is a competent shoe repairman and salesman, who has worked continuously for a Denver concern for 13 years, finds employment here all will be well. The separation that King knew from his daughter for 19 years and that which the daughter now is experiencing in being away from her husband, both will be ended. If not, there is no telling now what the end will be.

Stageberg is wearied of the separation, he said in a letter. And so are all of King's family, who want to keep Lola here and are convinced they would like her husband. They all want to be together—but the threat of another separation, either between father and daughter, or between husband and wife, intervenes to cause worry.

D. C. Employes Holding 2 Jobs To Be Named

Rep. Hoffman Probes Report of Employes Working During Leave

Names of Federal employes who are working on defense jobs in nearby Army cantonments while on leave will be sought by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, he disclosed last night as the Commissioners agreed to provide data requested as to District employes.

Hoffman said he will introduce a resolution Monday asking for the information on Federal workers. He plans to read to the House the names of District employes furnished him, but he admitted that he could carry the matter no further without House action.

The Commissioners earlier in the day instructed all department heads to report by noon today the names, addresses, salaries and kinds of leave of all municipal workers on leave as of December 10. They said the information will be submitted to Hoffman on Monday.

Hoffman said that if the defense jobs do not constitute legal violations of the law they are contrary to the spirit of Section 58, Title 5, United States Code.

Acting Auditor Pilkerton has held that employment at Fort Meade and Fort Belvoir does not violate the act, which, he said, is intended to prevent an employe from holding two Government jobs if the combined salaries exceed $2,000 a year.

"We created these jobs to cut down unemployment," Hoffman said, "and they certainly shouldn't be gobbled up by Government employes who already have secure jobs with liberal benefits as to leave and retirement."

Hoffman said facetiously that if it were to become the general practice for Government workers to spend their spare time earning extra money on defense jobs that members of Congress should get in on the money.

"We are in recess over three-day periods and haven't anything else to do," he said, "and we sure could use the extra money."

Announcement

Two Government personnel experts—A. J. Sarre and Henry Hubbard—will be heard tonight at 7:35 o'clock over WJSV on the Federal employe program, "Your Government This Week." The program is sponsored by the Federal Employe Council and is conducted by Jerry Klutitz, editor of The Post's Federal Diary.

SARRE

Sarre is personnel director of Federal Works Agency but he divides his time with the National Defense Commission, where he is a consultant with the Labor Supply Division. He was Louisiana State director of the National Youth Administration before he came here 14 months ago.

A staff assistant of the Council of Personnel Administration, Hubbard was formerly engaged in personnel work with Farm Credit Administration and with the New Jersey Civil Service Commission. He was also assistant director of the Civil Service Assembly.

D. C. Contractors Low Bidders For Court of Honor

Skinker & Garrett, local contractors, yesterday submitted a low bid of $46,404 to erect the Court of Honor stands for the Inaugural. This figure is $7,000 over estimates.

The stands will line both sides of Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, between West and East Executive Avenues. Following the bid opening, Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., chairman of the grandstand committee, said he would confer with Inaugural officials for advice regarding the contract award. Either more money will have to be allocated for the stands or fewer stands erected. It is believed that more money will be made available. Reasons given for the higher-than-estimate bid is the increased cost of lumber and labor.

Three other firms bid for the contract.

Mitchell Chosen To Head Camera Club

Thomas P. Mitchell, 2230 California Avenue Northwest, was elected president of the Department of Agriculture Camera Club last night. He also won two first places in a picture contest. Mitchell succeeds Dr. L. B. Olmstead. Other new officers are: Ernest Gooden, vice president; Mrs. Nola Gooden, secretary; Angela C. Janszen, treasurer.

D. C. Guard Unit To Hold Banquet

Company E, 121st Engineers, District National Guard, will hold its last social event before induction into Federal Service with a banquet tonight at 8 at the Harrington Hotel. The company, organized 18 years ago, will enter a year's training with its regiment in the Twenty-ninth Division February 3 under tentative present plans.

Approximately 100 veterans and former members of the company will attend and guests of honor will include Lieut. Col. Julian C. Oliff and Maj. Clarence S. Shields, of the Guard, and Capt. William C. Hall, Corps of Engineers, United States Army.

D. C. Jail Addition To Be Inspected

District officials today at 10 a. m. will make a final inspection of the $1,075,000 additions to the District Jail financed by a PWA loan.

Work on the institution includes construction of two wings and remodeling of the two old cell blocks and the central rotunda. The project, contracted by John McShain, Inc., was begun on June 12, 1939.

Expected to be present are Commissioner David McCoach, jr., Capt. John L. Person, Assistant Engineer Commissioner; Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect; Ray Huff, superintendent of District penal institutions; R. K. Linville, principal engineer, PWA; Capt. T. F. Rives, superintendent of the jail, and A. W. Crossley, executive secretary of the Public Utilities Commission.

Walter Pidgeon Will Fly Here for That Premiere

'Flight Command' Player to Appear in Person; The Spewacks to Revamp 'Out West, Etc.'; This, That and the Other About the Theater

OUT OF THE WELTER of rumors, ifs, whereases and buts surrounding the possible presence of various stars, executives and other film functionaries at the hemispheric premiere of "Flight Command," at Loew's Capitol on next Tuesday night, finally has come the definite announcement that Walter Pidgeon, featured with Ruth Hussey in Robert Taylor's support, will be on hand. Mr. Pidgeon is reputed to have left Hollywood yesterday by train to arrive in the Capital on Monday morning. One would think a Pidgeon would fly.

BELL

However, the point is that Mr. Pidgeon will be here—instead of in Toronto, as no one seems to have suggested—as a representative of Canada at Tuesday's gay goings-on. It appears in the record that he was born in East St. Johns, New Brunswick, which is in Canada, by the map.

By a great many, Walter Pidgeon will be remembered as a young singer who broke into "show business" first as a private entertainer, singing merry roundelays to his own accompaniment. Fred Astaire spied him one time and suggested to Arthur Hammerstein that he was likely musical comedy material. His first adventure in that field, I believe, was with Elsie Janis, following a hitch in stock under the late E. E. Clive. While he was playing the lead in "Puzzles," one of those West Coast scouts eyed his 6-feet-plus and so there he is in pictures—booming along on high at last, after a heartbreaking start that lasted until he had been "discovered" all over again.

In addition to everything else booked for the day, Mr. Pidgeon will appear on the Capitol stage at the premiere, scheduled to take off Tuesday night at 8:45. So now you know.

I take it all back. Just as that last paragraph was finished a frothy outrider galloped up from the Loew high command with dispatches to the effect that Mr. Pidgeon will arrive at the Washington Airport Monday morning—instead of Union Station—where he will be met by "Miss Flight Command," in the delectable person of Miss Adeline Betty Cox, the Venus of the airline stewardesses. Probably breaking the train jump to fly in from Alexandria! And evidently Pidgeons do.

Let's get this business straight about "Out West It's Different," at the National. To be sure, it is coming off tonight for rewriting, but that is the way Producer Max Gordon and Bella and Samuel Spewack, the authors, planned it. The comedy was booked for the week in Washington for the precise purpose of getting a shot at it in front of an audience. It was not even penciled in anywhere else over the holiday season. The preliminary performance in Princeton and the week here have been ample to enable the Spewacks to put the finger on their play's weaknesses—and there are plenty of them. The major one, in the view of this column, is that "Out West It's Different," as seen here, places its authors in the position of the man who is telling a funny story and leaves out the point. It begins with a rehearsal of The Nucleus, is interrupted by various amusing—and some not—incidents and situations and ends exactly where it started, with a rehearsal of The Nucleus, having said nothing and made no point either for or against the "art groups" which it purports to lampoon. The Spewacks feel sure that all this will be remedied by the time the piece opens in New York sometime in the future. Here's hoping.

Frank Braden and Richard Condon, those meandering musketeers of the movies, are in town holding high levees in the Willard Hotel, where they are showing off a couple of packing cases full of original drawings for "Fantasia," the much discussed Walt Disney-Leopold Stokowski collaboration, to the drama desks, music critics, art critics, visiting firemen and other craning necks. The Messrs. Braden and Condon—no relation to Harrigan & Calhoun of "Tin Pan Alley"—have got a jump or two ahead of the producer's ability to turn out touring units of the picture, so are lowering the high pressure of their transcontinental junket until the mechanics catch up. They confide that Washington and Boston will be among the first cities outside New York to see "Fantasia"—sometime in February probably, exact date and theater still unknown. There will be only 12 units on tour, at most.

Speaking of the National, the drama will be blacked out on E Street Christmas week. The next attraction, after Elmer Rice's "Flight to the West," opening next Monday night, will be Lew Brown's "Yokel Boy," with Joe Penner, Cass Daley, Sammy White and Lew Hearn heading the cast.

Triumphant Greeks Dance To Victory

Hollywood Compatriot Analyzes Their Ability To Overwhelm Foes

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Dec. 13.—Hermes Pan, the movie dance director, reported today for benefit of war commentators that the real reason for the Greeks trouncing the Italians lies in their ballet dancing.

Every man in the Greek army, Pan said, is a male Isadora Duncan, who has spent long hours practicing the twirls and the pliourettes of the classic dance.

"And so he can handle a bayonet like no other soldier in the world," Pan added. "He leaps from crag to crag with all the sureness of a goat and, thanks to his training, in the dance, he never makes a lost motion.

"I am surprised that the experts who try to interpret the war never realized the truth," Pan said. "I thought it was obvious. The Italians haven't a chance. Nobody has a chance against a Greek soldier except maybe another ballet dancer."

Bullied by Blondes

Pan, strangely enough, has just lost a big fight as instituted and won by a couple of blondes, the Misses Angela Blue and Pearlie May Norton.

Angela and Pearlie May are movie dancers, who haven't had work for six long months because they were blondes. It seems all the big musical movies lately have had Latin-American motifs. Either that, or South Sea Island settings.

Pearlie May and Angela, upon hearing that Pan was casting a chorus for another South American picture, "The Road to Rio," burst into his office, pinned him against the wall and made him listen.

Upshot was that they got jobs. So did numerous other blondes. They'll all wear black wigs as a concession to the movies' ideas of how Latin dancers ought to look.

For six weeks now Pan and his chorus of bogus brunettes have been working eight hours a day on their three big dance numbers. These will total exactly five minutes on the screen.

Most important dance is the samba, which seems to be a kind of two-step with gyrations added. Pan and Pearlie May demonstrated, and if all the youngsters in all the dance halls start doing it—this Nation is going to need some new dance halls. The old ones will be blitzkrieged.

"Bombshell" Leads Numbers

Carmen Miranda will lead the samba numbers. Don Ameche and Alice Faye will do the samba, too, and if the dance doesn't catch on all over America, then Hermes Pan is an Italian, who will eat spaghetti every night the rest of his life.

He's a nice guy. Only it's a little difficult these days for him to keep his mind off his ballet-dancing compatriots in Albania. We might as well let him talk some more about them:

"The dance first became an art in ancient Greece," he said. "Throughout the ages all Greeks learned to dance as a matter of course. There was nothing sissy about dancing to them. It was a part of their education. They came by it naturally. It strengthened their bodies. It gave them endurance and, above all, it taught them grace—and grace is important in all things, especially in using a bayonet."

This give you any ideas, War Department? Can your soldiers ballet dance, Mr. Stimson?

HANS JACOB, who broadcast from Strasbourg as part of the French propaganda directed at German listeners, was the principal speaker at the Overseas Club Wednesday. He told of the interference he encountered from some of the French officials' . . . During one broadcast, he referred to Hitler as "that so-called Feuhrer." Jacob immediately was censured for this, in a phone call from the Quai d'Orsay. "It is impolite," he was warned, "to refer to the leader of a foreign state in such a way, even if that foreign state is an enemy" . . . There were some listeners who suspected the truth of this story. "Very well, then," said Jacob, pointing to one table, "the man who phoned that warning to me was Count Serge Fleury. He's in this room now, sitting at that table."

THE SATURDAY REVIEW of Literature invited a number of noted authors to describe the manner in which they expect to spend Christmas Day. Gene Fowler's publishers censored his reply, and induced him to write another version . . . Fowler had written that his Christmas will be at least 6 or 7 times more pleasant than that of any other writer. "I intend spending the day at W. C. Field's home," wrote Fowler, "and we'll start early. Before sundown, therefore, while all the others are seeing only one Santa Claus, we'll be seeing at least 6 or 7.

THE THEATER GUILD'S current production of "Twelfth Night" is receiving a special publicity campaign. Dick Weaver has been hired to specialize in school-exploitation, visiting the local colleges, and addressing the students about the beauties of the production, and the excellent performances of Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans. . . . Wednesday, Weaver spoke to the students at N. Y. U.'s School of Dentistry . . . "Young man," the professor told him after the speech, "that was very nice of you. Since you've done something for us, we'll do something for you. Sit down, please." . . . Weaver sat down—and had his teeth cleaned.

GEORGE OPPENHEIMER, the screen-writer, arrived in New York Wednesday, accompanied by Harry Kurnitz, who had been a music critic before he went to Hollywood . . . "When we get to New York, I must take you to the Met., to hear 'Die Valkuere' " . . . I'm not familiar with that opera," Oppenheimer confessed. "Review the story for me" . . . "Well, it starts with a girl named Brunhilde," said Kurnitz. "She came from a very good family. Her father was God."

ONE OF ANDRE MAUROIS' colleagues was asked what he thought of Maurois' discourses about the fall of France. "I have a mild reaction to his strong feelings," he replied, "or a strong reaction to his mild feelings" . . . Mack Pearson, who worked as Ben Blue's sadfaced, pantomimie stooge, waited at the office of Jimmy Save, now presenting his one-man pantomime, "Mum's the Word." When Pearson finally was asked why he was waiting, he explained, appealingly: "I was waiting for a try-out, for the No. 2 company" . . . The "Tuscaloosa," on which the President now is cruising, is equipped with the Degaussing process to counteract the possibilities of damage from stray, magnetic mines.

NONE OF THE VETERANS appearing in "Panama Hattie" is risking any theatrical tricks upon Rags Ragland, who is making his first Broadway appearance in this show . . . Ragland knows all the tricks, and how to cope with them. Before Buddy de Sylva hired him, Rags worked for Minsky's and toured the burlesque circuit . . . Once a comic who wore a pair of overlong shoes, began upstaging Ragland—stepping behind him, and swinging at imaginary insects, to spoil Rags' punch-lines. Rags' solution was simple and direct. He went into the wings, returned with hammer and nails, and drove the nails through the comic's shoes, mooring him to the floor for the rest of the show.

EDDIE CANTOR entered Lindy's Wednesday night, and sat with Irving Berlin—who asked him whether he ever found a cure for insomnia. "I did—once," Cantor vowed. "I was in the Follies, and when I'd get home, I never could fall asleep. I finally asked Dr. Evan Evans for help, and he gave me 12 wonderful pills, which he assured me would put me to sleep." Eddie tried one pill that very night, and immediately went to sleep. For 12 nights, after swallowing one pill, he slept perfectly. Then he phoned Dr. Evans, told him how the pills had worked successfully, and asked him where he could get some more. "You can make the pills yourself," Dr. Evans confessed. "Just take some plain, powdered sugar and . . ."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Robert Buckner is an American who went to school at the University of Virginia and completed his education at the University of Edinburgh. Worked on the London Times for one year, cockneyist on London Daily Mail for one year and then free-lanced around London for an additional five years. Now writing screenplays for Warner Bros.
—HEDDA HOPPER.

By Robert Buckner

From writing an advice-to-lovelorn column for an English Sunday Supplement to a saddle-sore conductor of epic horse operas has been quite a trip, Hedda. I haven't been out of hot water for 12 years, for between Lord Beaverbrook and Director Mike Curtiz the only difference is their dialects.

HOPPER

You know how it is. Accidentally you write one Western picture, it goes over (which one don't?), and the boys keep you on horseback the rest of your life. Now I don't like horses, but I've had a lot of fun. Curtiz has taught me more American history in five years than they've got in the Library of Congress, if they're on their toes.

He says the Civil War was fought between the North and the East, which interested my grandfather very much. We finally got it straight in "Virginia City," though I had a little trouble keeping the Eighth New Jersey Cavalry from marching thru Nevada on their way to Tennessee. After I showed him a map Mike agreed that it was a little out of their way.

And in "Dodge City" I discovered something else. We had a scene where we wanted a Mexican to be very annoyed at an American, but we could not figure why. Our period was 1867. Mike slept on the problem that night and burst into my office the next morn- with the solution. The Spanish-American War had just been declared.

But Mike finally hit his stride in "Santa Fe Trail," which is coming out in a couple of weeks with a colossal World Premiere in Santa Fe, N. Mex. Plug.

You won't believe it, Hedda, but "Santa Fe Trail" is the story of Jeb Stuart and John Brown, whom Mike insistently called Joe Brown. This confused Raymond Massey a little at our first conference, as Ray didn't know whether he was to play the part with a wild look or a wide mouth. And when Mike told Errol Flynn who Jeb Stuart was in real life you could hear the Confederate veterans writhing in their tombs clear out here in Burbank. Finally I slipped Errol a book on the side.

No ma'm, there's never a dull minute working with Mike. And he's never turned out a dull picture.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Dec. 13 (INS).—I told Joan Bennett today that she was going to star with George Brent in "We Dare Not Love," at Columbia. She laughed and said, "I hope it is true, because I read the story and am crazy about it." I assured her it was true and that she would do that picture before "A Girl's Best Friend Is Wall Street." "How did you find out?" she queried. I said that would be telling, but, anyway, I don't believe I am talking out of school when I say that immediately after the New Year Joan and George check in at Columbia to star in this drama, which is a spy story, and according to Joan, a real thriller, by Charles Bennett.

PARSONS

Joan is pleased that George Brent, one of our better actors, is to have the top male role. A nice movie combination—Joan and George.

I am awfully glad that Binnie Barnes has made up her mind to play Mrs. Valentine in "Skylark." Mrs. V. is the vamp who tries to steal both Claudette Colbert's husband and her cook. While we were on tour, Paramount was wiring Binnie, but she didn't make up her mind until she read the script—and that she has done in Palm Springs. I talked with her and Mike Frankovich, her favorite radio announcer and actor, today in Palm Springs and they are having a wonderful rest. I envy them. Palm Springs sounds so alluring this time of year. The bride and groom return Tuesday.

Norma Shearer leaves the twenty-first for Sun Valley with her children to spend Christmas. The Darryl Zanucks are also planning to go to the snow country with their three to have a white Christmas. Norma told me that she goes on the Arch Oboler program the twentieth and will turn over the proceeds to the "Bundles for Britain." Her next picture for M-G-M is "Tonight at 8:30." Sidney Franklin has taken "We Were Dancing" and "Ways and Means" and combined them in one story. "Shadow Play," another of the Coward plays, will be written into a broadcast which she will probably do for charity.

May Robson has more pep than any girl in Hollywood and as I write this "Muzzy May" is on her way to Santa Fe, N. M., for the "Santa Fe Trail" premiere. Last year she was the hit of the trip on the "Virginia City" trek and, in spite of her 75 years, had more fun than any of the glamour girls and boys. When she gets back from the New Mexico shindig, May goes to work at Warners in "30 Days Hath September," a human interest comedy of the type La Robson does so well.

Chatter in Hollywood: Just to keep the record straight and not to have any more rumors, Ann Sheridan did not marry George Brent in Mexico—or any other place. George Raft, who was also suspended by Warners, although now his option has been taken up, suggested that he and Ann do a picture called "The Suspended Kids." I have an idea that Ann and Warners will get together, although neither will make the first move.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Astrid Allwyn got her final divorce decree from Robert Kent yesterday, Friday the thirteenth. She also undergoes a minor operation; the Johnny Weissmullers had a reunion dinner at Sardis before they went to Santa Fe; James Fitzpatrick (he is the Travelog genius) welcomed an 8-pound daughter today; Randy Scott will stop off at Mayo Brothers on his way east for a general check up; Roz Russell is tearing herself away from Freddie Brisson to spend the holidays with her family in Connecticut.

Katherine Aldridge and John Swope a dinner twosome; Arline Judge has been on salary at Twentieth Century-Fox since November, so the chances are she will make a movie there; Ann and Artie Stebbins celebrated five years of married life with a cocktail and dinner party. Gracie Allen, with one of her new trick hats, started a gin-rummy game with me and we would still be playing if I hadn't been called home. Rabbi Magnin, who married Ann and Artie, stopped in to give them his blessing.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

—With Shirley Povich

WAR DEPARTMENT. The American Football League's flirtation with the immediate future of big John Kimbrough, the Texas A. and M. back, may mean war—with the National Football League. It is serious, because the fact that Kimbrough is listening to an American League offer indicates that the league has found the backing to challenge the National's monopoly on the big-shot stars.

POVICH

The situation is more than slightly reminiscent of the baseball war of 40 years ago when the American League moved into the major league picture after several years under the heel of the National. Clark Griffith conducted a personal raid on National League player rosters, persuaded enough stars to join the new league and within two years firmly established a new big league.

For years the National Football League has been looking down its collective nose at the American. The latter league never could make a go of it. Teams of its various cities folded for lack of backing and it never pretended honestly to be anything more than a minor league. But the impression is now that the league has more funds. If it can outbid the National for Kimbrough other college stars will be disposed to listen. They must have made Kimbrough a pretty fair offer to get him to come to New York to listen further, as he is doing.

Actually, there isn't any reason why a New League couldn't successfully challenge the National League—except a lack of capital. There is nothing to prevent the American League from corralling as many or more of the stars from college ranks, as the National. The National has no exclusive claim to them. The American League's money, if there is American League money, is just as acceptable.

It would be entirely possible for the American League to wind up not only with Kimbrough, but with Tommy Harmon. The fact that they have been drafted by the Chicago Bears and Cardinals wouldn't matter. The draft is binding only on the teams of the league, not on the players. The league that shows 'em the most money would get the players.

If the National League, pleased by its flourishing success, does lapse into smugness, and refuses to match the bidding of an opposition league, it may be the real beginning of a rival major league. The public still goes for the highly-publicized stars and a new league that contained either Kimbrough or Harmon, or both, would command respect.

The American Football League's task of building itself into a major league is comparable to the American Baseball League's fight of 40 years ago, but it seems to be an easier one. The American League is not forced to raid the National League teams for talent because a new, virtually ready-made crop of players is graduated from the colleges every year.

The backing of the American League is as yet vague, but certainly the New York Yankee team which is dealing with Kimbrough is not offering him a contract that may run as high as $15,000 unless they have assurance that other cities in the league have new capital.

The National League's success has inspired wealthy men to move into organized football and they may be disposed to take a chance on the American League's future. Within the last year Fred Mandel brought fresh capital to the Detroit team of the National League and Alex Thompson bought the Pittsburgh franchise for $150,000.

Professional football has come to be the perfect reflecting board particularly for young men with money to invest and a yearning to step into the public eye. There still are, doubtless, young scions of wealth on the loose with the kind of dough that a football team needs and they are the men the new league is courting.

The American Football League won't have the trouble finding parks that the young American Baseball League had 40 years ago. It already has a hold on Yankee Stadium, and municipal stadiums are available in Philadelphia and Baltimore, other Eastern points. Boston is a natural spot for another Eastern club and Fenway Park is available.

In the West, the new league hopes to place teams in Cincinnati, St. Louis, Louisville and Kansas City. Park owners in those cities are envious of the revenue pro football fetches in the East. The new league may be meaning business when it talks to Kimbrough.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 13.—Foreign and domestic:

Hitler has at long last had sense enough to bomb the heart of English resistance. His Henkels and Messerschmidts dropped their iron eggs on the playing fields of Eton yesterday.

CONSIDINE

Max Schmeling, interviewed on the German radio, told the world "I've never retired, not yet." Two negatives make a positive—a positive liar out of Maxie. If Maxie hasn't retired, why was that towel thrown in the ring during the first round of the return match with Joe Louis?

Mons. Jeff Dickson, suh, the Parisian-Natchezian, has had fresh news from Paris, Germany, strange news. He told us:

"When the Germans first came into Paris they outlawed all professional sport. But one of my directors who stayed in Paris finally got an audience with one of the invader officials and pointed out to the fellow that boxing alone had paid millions and millions of francs into the French treasury, in tax money. Well, now Paris has boxing again. But what boxing!

"M. Paul Rousseau, the General Phelan of French boxing for more than 30 years, was erased. Victory Breyer, the owner of a defunct sports paper named "Echo Des Sports" is the new Phelan. The Germans were eager for the tax money, but the military officials refused to sanction a bout at night. The only license Breyer could get for the first show was at 8:30 on a Sunday morning. That's a great time to go to a fight, eh?

"As far as I can find out—you see, my letters have to be smuggled to Vichy and mailed from there—they've staged four shows in Paris. There wasn't enough money to pay the fighters after the first show so the announcer made an appeal from the ring and the people tossed in francs and marks and some guy got the bright idea to go across the street to my house and get a couple of bottles of good wine out of my cellar to give to the main event winner. The fellow also got a sack of potatoes and a piece of meat.

"Since then the fighters have been paid by coins and paper currency being thrown in the ring. So the ropes have been dispensed with and the ring is enclosed by a solid board fence that lets down on a hinge device when the fighters are in action. When they've finished the sides of the ring go up and the call comes for the dough. The sides keep the money from rolling or blowig off the canvas. A flunky sweeps up, gives it to the fighters, after the tax is reduced, and that's that.

"There are no sports pages left in the Paris papers. So the fights are advertised in the want ads. My old matchmaker, Paul La France, simply inserts an ad stating, 'we want the sporting crowd to come to see our fight tonight.'

"The last word had was that the Germans were going to remove the prisoners in the Palais Des Sport—that was the Madison Square Garden of France. The 250 meter bicycle track in the Palais wasn't damaged by the bomb that hit the place, but the prisoners almost wrecked it with cigaret butts. Jacques Goddet, of 'L'Auto' is going to run the bike races. They're trying to get up a hockey league, too, but they can't find any goalies. I guess the goalies were too accustomed to stopping things to remember not to stop bullets. The first basketball game is scheduled for the end of December, but the big surprise is what the Germans have done to wrestling. They've outlawed it from sports arenas and decreed that if it is presented at all it must be staged in music halls. Poor Paoli and Deglande! I guess the Germans aren't as dumb about sports as I thought they'd be."

Delts, Sigma Chis Battle for Cage Title

Sigma Chi and Delta Tau Delta basketball teams will play for the fraternity championship of George Washington University tonight at 8:30 in G. W. gym.

Winners of the two fraternity leagues, both teams have taken five games and lost nine, defeating between them, all other ten Greek organizations.

Sigma Chi is laying for Dean Nichols, Delt, who is high scorer of both leagues. The Delts, on the other hand, intend to take the fraternity crown from Sigma Chi, won last year.

No varsity athletes are allowed to play.

Eagles and Orioles Battle to 5-5 Deadlock

Regulation Game Ends In 4-4 Tie

Orioles Bang One Home in Final Four Minutes of Regular Time Before 4,082

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Eagles scored three times in the final period of their crucial Eastern Amateur League match with the Baltimore Orioles, last night, but finally had to be content with a 5-5 overtime tie before a record crowd of 4,062 paying patrons at Riverside Stadium.

The Eagles came from behind once, and the Orioles rallied twice in the exciting affair, Baltimore's comebacks tying the score at 4 to 4 in regulation time and again late in the ten-minute overtime period.

The upshot of it all was that the Eagles narrowly retained the Eastern Amateur League lead they have held all season, and simultaneously with their courageous performance silenced critics who have predicted their collapse.

Courteau Is Injured

In preventing the Orioles from seizing a tie for first place, which would have been the result of a Baltimore victory, Washington maintained its one-game advantage over the Monumental City six as each gained one point by the deadlock.

The victory was a costly one for the Eagles, however, as they lost the services of Paul Courteau for several days. The scrappy French Canadian wing was carried from the ice early in the third period with a painfully sprained left ankle. He will not make the Eagles' weekend trip to meet River Vale tonight, and New York tomorrow afternoon.

The Eagles, after falling behind, 3-1, in the second period, came out strongly in the final session to forge into a 4-3 lead and appeared headed for victory when Jack Riley counted his second goal for Baltimore to tie the count at 4-4.

Eagles Knot Count

Previously Norman Burns, Washington's high-scoring center, had launched the Eagles' rally by stealing the puck from three Baltimore players deep in Oriole territory and ramming home a beauty. Less than 2 minutes later Washington tied the score at 3-3, when Frank Mailley, assisted by Jack MacBeth and Burns, poked one in to climax a full minute of frustrated Washington shots. Then, almost 11 minutes later, Dewey put the Eagles ahead, 4-3, on another double pass, Len Burrage and Roy McBride, only to see Riley step in to again knot the count at 16:09.

After a minute's rest the teams went into the overtime period and Dewey once again established the Eagles in the lead when he tallied at 6:36 on a pass from the brilliantly playing Burns, but Jack Dyte scored one of his infrequent goals for the Orioles at 7:15, and the match ended 5-5 though both teams threatened in the last couple of minutes.

Burrage played a magnificent defensive game for Washington, and Goalie Frank Ceryance was a tower of strength before the Baltimore nets.

The Eagles, much improved over their pepless performance against the Atlantic City Sea Gulls Tuesday, completely dominated a fast first period, taking a 1-0 lead on a difficult shot by Burns after a goal by Burrage had been disallowed because the puck was deflected into the nets off Courteau's skate.

Southeastern May Adopt New Game Policy

Minimum of 6 Loop Games Is Proposed At Annual Meeting

By the Associated Press

Athens, Ga., Dec. 13.—Association of the Southeastern Conference with sponsors of the annual Sugar Bowl and Orange Bowl games, and adoption of a minimum six-game conference football schedule was recommended tonight by retiring President G. D. Humphrey, of Mississippi State.

Dr. Humphrey, who is succeeded by President R. C. Foster of the University of Alabama, told members of the 12-school Athletic Association they should become actively interested in the post season gridiron features if they intended to continue approval of participation by conference teams.

Georgia Tech and Tulane played in the Orange and Sugar Bowl games a year ago, and this year invitations were accepted by Mississippi State and Tennessee. The latter went to the Rose Bowl after its successful 1939 season.

Drawing attention to the Pacific Coast Conference sponsorship of the Rose Bowl classic, and recent action of the Southwestern Conference in taking over the Cotton Bowl event at Dallas, Tex., Dr. Humphrey asserted the Southeastern Conference should work with present sponsors of the Miami and New Orleans games to preserve high standards.

The day's business session brought withdrawal from the conference of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., which declared it found big-time football competition impossible and equal representation in other sports "very difficult."

Nelson Takes Lead In $10,000 Golf Play

The Byron Shoots 134 to Lead Field of Stars at Miami by Two Strokes; Loving Drops to Third

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 13.—Byron Nelson, big, blond slugger from Toledo, Ohio, shattered par for the second day in succession today to forge into the lead in the $10,000 Miami Open golf tournament with a convincing 134 for the 36 holes.

Nelson's performance led the star-studded field of professionals and amateurs by two strokes and he became a "hot" favorite to win top money of $2,500.

Little Ben Hogan, White Plains, N. Y., was in second place with 136, taking a 69 today after his blazing 67 yesterday when he tied Ben Loving, Springfield, Mass., for medalist honors. Loving needed a par 70 today and was in third place with 137.

"Lord Byron" Gets Hot

"Lord Byron" had seven fours and a pair of threes on the outgoing nine and parred every hole but one, where he took a birdie. He dropped a 30-foot putt on the ninth green to post a 34.

Nelson moved to the tenth tee and began scorching the back side of the winding Miami Springs course with three birdies on the first four holes.

He needed a par 3 on the fourteenth and took a bogie 6 on the fifteenth. Nelson had bogies on the next two and it looked for a time like he would slip back into the crowd of also-rans.

His second shot was on the edge of the eighteenth green, and his first putt was short by 2 feet. Then, he dropped a curling putt to take a par 4 and finish the nine with 32 and a total of 65 for the day, five under par for the 18 holes.

Darkness Halts Heafner

Clayton Heafner, Linville, N. C., was 4 under par when darkness halted play at the seventeenth tee. He will complete the round tomorrow and should he par the last two holes he would tie Nelson, thanks to his 68 yesterday.

'Ace' Parker Defies League Order to Play

Dodger Star to Pass Pro All-Star Game; Faces Expulsion

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 13.—Clarence (Ace) Parker, All-National League halfback with the Brooklyn Dodgers, said tonight he would not go to Los Angeles to play in the All-Star game against the Chicago Bears December 28.

Parker made it plain that he had no intention of playing in the game despite the fact he faces a fine and expulsion from the league for his stand. He wired Carl L. Storck, president of the league, to that effect today.

Parker said: I am through with football until next season. I came out of this one with an injured ankle and a separation in my shoulder. They will just have to go ahead with the fine and expulsion as far as I'm concerned. I'm not going to the Coast for the All-Star game.'

Parker also said that he would be forced to withdraw from exhibition games scheduled here Sunday and at Richmond on New Year's Day.

S. Conference Expected to Admit G.W.U.

Southern Body Holds Meeting Today; Routine Matters to Be Discussed

By the Associated Press

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 13.—Scores of coaches and faculty advisers on athletics representing the 13 schools in the Southern Conference came here today for tomorrow's annual meeting, expected to be the quietest in many a day.

Topping the business docket is a proposal by the University of Maryland that George Washington University, of Washington, be admitted to the conference to fill a vacancy caused by the withdrawal of the University of Virginia a couple of seasons ago when the Graham plan for football deemphasis was in its ascendancy.

There was little expectation that George Washington would fail of admittance.

Conferees were arriving until late afternoon.

To Hold Closed Session

Dr. W. H. Wannamaker, dean of Duke University and conference president, got here in midafternoon and immediately began rounding up members of the executive committee for a closed session to consider matters expected to come before it, most of which were described as routine.

Other committees on football, basketball, boxing and the other sports had meetings on tap, but chairmen for the most part indicated that they would not make public the committee actions in advance of the general business session, set for tomorrow morning.

Youthful appearing Max Farrington, director of athletics for George Washington, was on hand in behalf of his school.

A dinner for the conferees tonight was the principal event on the day's program aside from the committee meetings.

In addition to the George Washington membership proposal, chief items of business tomorrow are expected to be:

Change in Dates

1. Changing the date of the conference cross-country meet from the Saturday before Thanksgiving Day to the third Monday in November.

2. Considering a proposal by the University of Richmond to apply the conference rule limiting participation in collegate athletics to one freshman and three varsity years over a five-year period to "all competition after registration in any institution above secondary rank."

3. Consideration of a proposal by North Carolina State that the eligibility period be extended for students called to military service from five to as many as seven years.

A proposal also is expected that the conference form its own agency for booking football officials rather than pay a Lake Wales, Fla., agency that books for both the Southern and Southeastern Conferences a $250 fee instead of $100 as heretofore. This proposal is expected to be made in reply to a move to hike the fee.

One member said the caliber of the officiating was satisfactory but he couldn't see why the fee should be raised $150.

Dick Pinck, W. & L. Football Star, Song Writer Also

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Dec. 13.—You knew Dick Pinck could play football and basketball but betcha didn't know Washington and Lee's noted athlete is also a song writer.

His versatility was demonstrated tonight when the Southern Collegians, W. and L. dance orchestra, presented at the annual varsity show a number for which Pinck supplied the lyrics and collaborated with Bob Bruce Posnick, a University of Virginia student from New York, on the musical score.

Ex-Sailor Wins Easily In New York

Challenger Dazed By Ring Wisdom Of Old Campaigner

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—Ken Overlin, ring wisdom was even too much for a "double 13" jinx tonight, and the former sailor retained his world middleweight championship with an easy 15-round victory over Steve Belloise, who what bewildered Steve Belloise in Madison Square Garden. Overlin weighed 159; Belloise, 154.

With the largest crowd of the local indoor fistic season on hand, Ken went through this defense of his crown on Friday the 13th and thirteenth year of fighting and never going away. He knew too much of the answers for the rangy New Yorker and gave him a lesson the way.

On the Associated Press scorecard, the one-time tar, from Decatur, Ill., by way of Norfolk, won 10 of the 15 rounds. The two judges, John Potter and Bill Healy, voted for Ken. Referee Arthur Donovan came up with the verdict for Steve.

For a fellow who was supposed to be ill with a heavy cold, Overlin showed a remarkable amount of endurance.

Belloise Outsmarted

Belloise gave the impression in the way that he was able to walk in and take Ken any time. But he didn't, simply because the veteran titleholder outsmarted him. Ken was in trouble only once—in the second round, when Belloise connected with right and left right on the whiskers. Ken's legs buckled and he fell into a clinch until his head cleared.

After that, he waltzed home, although Belloise rallied in the seventh, eighth and ninth rounds.

Ken's left eye was cut by Belloise's long straight left in the eighth round, but he evened this score by splitting the bridge of Belloise's nose in the eleventh.

Belloise's major failure was in not walking right in and exploding his right hand in Ken's face, as he did in the sixth round of their previous fight on November 1, which Overlin won by a narrow margin. On that occasion, Steve had the sailor on the verge of a knockout only to lose out when Overlin's rally carried him to victory.

There were times, particularly in the fourth and fifth heats, when the crowd of 16,353, who contributed to a gross gate of $42,338.81 to make this show the outstanding financial success of the season, stomped and clapped in unison for action, as the two circled each other.

Champ Surprises

In retaining the middleweight championship, as recognized in California, New York, Pennsylvania and some other places, Overlin started out with some surprising tactics by winging right hands at Steve's head. This change from a boxer to a slugger lasted only through the first three rounds, however.

After that, Ken resorted to boxing tactics, with body punching and lefts to the face as his offensive gestures. Belloise, although throwing but few rights to the head, gave Ken quite a going over with right swings to his side.

Afterward, Overlin's manager, Chris Dundee announced he was planning to "lay Ken off" for several months because he "really is ill." There was one man in the house, however, who wouldn't believe this. He was Steve Belloise.

In the six-round semifinal after the main bout, Aaron (Al) Smith, red-headed Los Angeles welterweight, stopped Irish Eddie Dunne of New York in 1 minute, 32 seconds of the third round. Smith, who weighed 149½ to Dunne's 148¼, came up off the floor in the first round to drop the New Yorker twice in the third before the referee stepped in to stop it.

Wilson Scores 57-50 Victory Over Gallaudet

Wilson Teachers basketball team grabbed an early lead and managed to hold it throughout their game with Gallaudet College last night at Kendall Green and emerged a 57-to-50 victor before a capacity crowd in the small gym.

With Hal Ifshin and Ernie Cole hitting the cords with clock-like regularity, the Teachers stifled a Gallaudet threat midway in the last period and pulled away near the end. At one point in the quarter Gallaudet had pulled within 2 points of Wilson, but then the attack bogged down. Ifshin accounted for 15 points and Cole tallied 16.

Ludovico, Butler and Johnson carried the scoring honors for the losers, each tallying four baskets. Butler also dropped in five free tosses and Johnson, four.

Wilson's advantage in height over the Blues helped no end. Gallaudet used two teams in the game. Ray Holben, of the winners, sank 9 out of 11 attempted foul shot.

Maryland Team Dealt Second Blow; Harn Has Given Up Studies

Recently Johnny Harn, 120-pound holdover regular, dropped out of school.

The loss of Harn and Gilmore leaves the Terrapins with a considerably weaker nucleus around which to build a team for a schedule of six dual meets, starting with South Carolina January 11 at home.

Four lettermen—Izzy Alperstein, 145 pounds, Izzy Leites, George Pyles and Josh Hughes, 165 or 175 pounds—head the Terrapin ring candidates.

Supplementing this quartet are four other 1939 holdovers, Charley Dorr and Rowan Scarborough, 127-pounders; Kenneth Evans, 145 pounds, and Robert Stalecup, 175 pounds, and four promising sophomores.

The sophomores are Judson Lincoln, 120 pounds; Harry Benson, 127 pounds; Matthew Mezzanotte, 135 pounds, and Herb Gunther, 175 pounds. Gunther, undefeated in two freshman bouts, is highly regarded by Ivan Nedomatsky, the former Maryland lightweight star, who is handling the squad until a head coach is named.

After South Carolina, Maryland will meet Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., January 18; Virginia at Charlottesville February 3; Catholic University here February 8; Western Maryland at Westminster February 12, and North Carolina at home February 15. Also Maryland will compete in the annual conference tournament.

Champion Illinois High School Team Faces Suspension

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 13.—The threat of possible suspension from the Illinois High School Athletic Association rules over Fenger High today if the school's football team goes through with a scheduled post-season appearance in Miami, Fla., Christmas Day.

C. V. Whitten, executive secretary of the association, said a rule put into effect only this year forbids members from playing post-season games.

"If Fenger plays," Whitten said, "they will be liable for a penalty, but what that would be is a matter of conjecture. The penalty, if any, in each case, would be determined by our board of directors."

James Smith, Fenger principal, said he was not disturbed by the association rule. He pointed out that Fenger also was a member of the Public School League of Chicago, which has its own rules and regulations.

Fenger is the high school football champion of Chicago.

Texas Aggies' Mr. Kimbrough Makes Himself Comfortable Here

Jarrin' John Talks Little Football When Discovered in Wee Sma' Hours Awaiting Chance for Forty Winks

By Walter Wood

Pullman washrooms were not made for John Kimbrough.

He was sitting on a leather-upholstered bench built against a wall not as wide as he is tall. Two other men in the room had space enough to breathe and that was all. When we walked in each of the two took a deep breath and held it. But you couldn't crowd Kimbrough any more than you could have squeezed the locomotive of the train.

He wore no 10-gallon hat, but we would have been less surprised if he had been fondling six-guns instead of reading page one of the New York Times. We had never before seen Kimbrough, but knew that this big figure was the one we were looking for. We introduced ourselves.

A Gentle Drawl

When he stood up "with the undulations of a tiger, smooth and easy, as if muscles flowed beneath his skin," and when he spoke—"the voice was Southern and gentle and drawling"—we thought of the man Owen Wister called the Virginian and knew that here was one like that horseman of the plains. This man, though, was a Texan.

We looked up and down that 6-foot-2, 220-pounder and wondered whether to call him "Jarrin' John," as some are wont to do, or "Mr. Kimbrough." We would have been sophisticated if we had called him "Jarrin' John" and we didn't want to be after Kimbrough had said, "I'm mighty glad to know you." I thought I would never get my fingers around his hand and my companion agreed later that gripping it was like pressing a 2 by 4.

"Are you going to play pro football, Mr. Kimbrough?" (This was the first inkling the two crowded customers had that this large obstruction in the washroom was the Texas Aggies' All-American fullback. A hissing sound was heard and we thought the train was pulling out. It was the crowded gents—they had let loose the precious breath.)

Answers Question

To say that Kimbrough chose his words carefully would be an understatement. He bandies them around in his mind like he does opposing players then rolls them off his tongue like he slips past a tackler. The answer he gave was as vague as the look in his eye.

"Well, I don't know. I'm waiting for the Fordham game."

The All-American was en route to New York by plane and when it was grounded at Washington Airport because of weather conditions he boarded a 2:10 a. m. train at Union Station. It was 2 a. m. when we found him in the washroom. He was just a sleepy-eyed boy.

"I'm going to fall asleep in here if that boy don't soon get my bunk fixed," he said, and sat down again. His breathless fellow travelers, now speechless, too, just stared at the quiet giant who could have had the town if he asked for it.

Jarrin' John Rivals Sphinx In Big Town

Kimbrough Won't Say 'Yes' or 'No' to Queries on Future

By Jack Guenther,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Dec. 13.—Jarrin' John Kimbrough roared into the big town today after a whirlwind trip from Texas and coyly announced he wouldn't say yes and he wouldn't say no to professional football offers—but intimated he might be coaxed if the owners made it worth his while.

Sequestered in the strict secrecy of a hideout in which sport writers and publicity agents were merely 20 deep, the All-America fullback from Texas A. & M. offered little encouragement to New York Yankee officials who underwrote the expenses of his junket. John bluntly said he wanted to see the cash.

One of the many Yankee attaches explained this statement meant Kimbrough leaned to neither the established National Professional League nor the fledgling American circuit which is trying to lure him away. National League rights to the Aggies' star are held by the Chicago Bears, who obtained him in a deal with the Chicago Cardinals following the recent draft.

Just a Pleasure Trip

"We have not signed Mr. Kimbrough and he has made no commitments to anyone," the spokesman continued, while Big John more than held his own under the rapid-fire questioning of the writers. "We merely invited him to New York so he could meet the Yankees and see the town. After all, he still is a student at Texas A. and M., and the impending Cotton Bowl game is his first concern."

Speaking with a great deal of poise and a marked drawl, Kimbrough told the gathering he hadn't made a final choice among professional ball, an Army career or agriculture. He intimated that he certainly would not decide until after Texas A. and M. had met Fordham in the bowl on New Year's Day.

He said the Aggies confidently expected to win the Cotton Bowl contest, but only after a hard fight. His mates, he indicated, weren't underestimating Fordham. As for the defeat by Texas U., that was just one of those things. The Aggies just couldn't seem to get going, he said. But they hope to make up for that with the Rams.

Big Man Has Busy Day

After the confused reception, Big John was hurried away for the first round of a hectic schedule which will keep him busy until he departs for home by plane on Sunday evening. Today he was programed for two radio speeches, a trip to Fordham, the middle-weight title fight between Ken Overlin and Steve Belloise, and a tour of three night clubs. Tomorrow he will watch polo matches and meet people.

The Yankees' attempts to sign Kimbrough mark the beginning of an offensive by the American League against the National. In the past the teams of the newer circuit have had to be content with players the National clubs didn't want or men who were past their prime. The Yankees also are reportedly dickering with Tom Harmon of Michigan and Marshall Robnett, Kimbrough's team mate at A. and M.

One of the most interesting parties at today's clam-bake was not a football coach, but Jimmy Johnston—a prize fight manager. Johnston hovered at the fringe of the crowd and kept circling Big John to get a complete view of his 200-odd pounds of bone and muscle. He didn't say anything, but he appeared intrigued. At the moment he has no good heavyweight in his string.

Colored Athletic Body Hears Talk By Congressman

Richmond, Va., Dec. 13.—Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, of Chicago, told the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association today that America "is the brightest spot in the world today for the Negro; nowhere else in the world is a minority group safe."

"We must assume the full responsibility of American citizenship if we ever expect to receive the full recognition of the majority group," the Congressman asserted in a talk on "The Hope of a Minority Group in America."

Mitchell told his audience that in the present world crisis the Negro must subordinate his fight for his rights to the task of aiding the Nation's defense preparations.

The Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association is the controlling organization for sports in Negro colleges on the Atlantic Seaboard. Delegates representing the 13 member schools of the association are attending the sessions, which will continue through tomorrow at Virginia Union University.

What Price Glory?

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 14 (AP).—Tom Harmon, Michigan's All-American football star, is so busy that he has hired a secretary to keep track of his mail. Hermon, attending this and that function in his honor, has been traveling steadily for two weeks. Letters have averaged 30 a day.

Generals Host To Colonials In Opener

Tonight's Battle Also Marks Inaugural For George Washington

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lexington, Va., Dec. 13.—Washington and Lee's Virginia State champions will open their major 1941 cage season here tomorrow night at 7:45, engaging the powerful George Washington University Colonials in Doremus Gymnasium. The game will likewise mark the opening of the G. W. season.

Coach Cookie Cunningham, W. and L. preceptor, declared he hardly believed his ball club was ready for a test with one of the Nation's best quints in view of the minimum time the Generals have had to work in contrast with the long preseason training experienced by the Colonials.

Sophs May Start

Three sophomores are listed by Cunningham as probable starters to compete against the smooth, veteran squad that will journey here from Washington.

The strong possibility of Capt. Howard Dobbins donning his sizable knee brace and joining the squad was made known the middle of the week after a Richmond physician issued the encouraging "go ahead and play" sign to the clever All-State pivot man. But hardly a chance exists that the Louisville senior will be able to go full pace so early in the season.

In the absence of Dobbins from the starting group, Jeff Hudson, a sophomore, will probably handle the pivot. Another soph duet, Leo Signaigo and Johnny Ligon, are due for berths at forward and guard, respectivley, with an outside chance that Ed Cuttino, a rangy junior, might get the nod ahead of Ligon.

Pinch Gary to Play

Dick Pinck and Bobby Gary, senior forward and guard combine, complete the starting ticket for the Generals.

Word from Washington indicated a big experienced quint taking the floor for the perennially-potent Colonials. Coach Bill Reinhart will probably work with Joe Comer and Matt Zunic at forward spots, Charlie Jones at center, and the terrifically-fast guard combination of Lou Veltri and Bob Gilham. Among the outstanding reserve sophomore material at Reinhart's beckoning is little Joey Gallagher who well faniliarized himself with Doromus' hardwood when twice drawing all-tournament honors in W. & L.'s South Atlantic prep tourney. Gallagher competed for St. John's. The tournament was discontinued after the 1939 meeting.

Novice Bout Features Show Of Glovers

The Golden Gloves tournament of Washington swung into its second round last night at Turner's Arena, highlighted by a furious novice bout between John Ellis, Olympic A. C., and Capitol Heights' Bill Ford.

Little time was wasted by the slugging pair, Ellis accounting for a technical knockout in one minute of the first round.

Exciting Card

From the first bout of the evening, in which Richard Mullen, National Training School, outpointed unattached Benny Rodill, the card was an exciting one. A large crowd sat in on proceedings, in several bouts contributing to the general excitement with well-rounded boos.

Biggest raspberry of the night was hung on the decision awarded Alex Sinegal, of St. Mary's, over Herb Draheim, Merrick, in the 147-pound class.

The 135-pounders were paced by fast, hard-punching Walter Thomas, Prince George, who easily scored a technical knockout over Matty Miller, N. T. S. The end came for Miller after one minute and five seconds of the first round.

Horton Is Victor

In the first bout of the senior 118-pound class, Al Horton, St. Mary's B. C., and Joe Gannon, of the Apollo A. C., squared off to give an interesting show, with Horton coming out the victor.

Danny Petro, unattached, and last year's 112-pound victor, scored a decision over George De Zerne, of the National Guards. Both De Zerne and Petro kept up a furious pace throughout the entire fight.

Last year's runner-up for the 147-pound title, Nick Mancini, went down to defeat at the hands of Robert Curtin. Curtin, an unheralded lad, proved to be too much for the hardy Mancini.

Majors Leave Stove Leaguers With Something to Mull Over

By Judson Bailey

New York, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Billy Herman, wife of the Chicago Cubs' veteran keystone sacker, was asked about Lou Stringer, the rookie Chicago is bringing up from Los Angeles . . . "The only thing I see wrong with him," replied Mrs. Herman, "is that he is a second baseman." . . . It's no wonder the American League couldn't do any trading during the two weeks of the baseball meetings . . . that seven-player triangular swap yesterday would take two weeks to figure out . . . the $400,000 price tag you've seen put on the Boston Bees is a little higher than the sale ticket given Al Powell, we're told.

The National League lined up for continuance of the spring All-Star game but was persuaded out of its stand by the American League in the joint meeting. There is no chance of the magnates reconsidering at present, but they are willing to play team exhibition games or do anything else the Government wants for the help of the Army training program . . . The reason they didn't vote to contribute equipment to the Army camps is that the Government has appropriated a couple of million dollars for its recreation program and the big leagues want to find out what is expected of them before making any moves.

There still is a chance that the controversial rule allowing officials of one club to sign players for an affiliated club in a different league may not get into the books this year . . . Before the majors adopted it this week they reworded the amendment passed by the minors at Atlanta . . . Now it has to be voted on by mail by the 43 leagues in the National Association and will have to receive unanimous approval to become effective . . . Burleigh Grimes, who is on baseball's suspended list, hovered around the major league meetings visiting friends.

Ever since he has been in baseball Reuben F. Melton, the already famous rookie pitcher of the Phillies, has been trying to live down inevitable nickname of "Rube" . . . He signs his name R. Frank Melton . . . The reason he was coveted by the big leaguers in spite of his inconsequential record of 10 victories and 10 losses for the Columbus Redbirds was that he led the American Association in strikeouts with 142 . . . the Detroit Tigers will have a right to wince if they lose both Hank Greenberg and Pitcher Harold White in the draft . . . White, with order number 18 at Utica, N. Y., already has taken his physical examination . . . He had the lowest earned run average in the International League last season with 2.43 and his record of 16 victories and four defeats for Buffalo was the best percentage in the circuit.

C. U. to Meet Duke Before Large Crowd

First Official Cage Game Friday Drawing Interest of Fans

One of the largest crowds to see an opening Catholic University basketball game is expected to be on hand at Brookland gym Friday night when Coach Fod Cotton unveils his 1940-41 cagemen against Duke University.

Already the phones in the athletic office have been buzzing with inquiries about ticket prices, etc., something unheard of in recent years because of the poor showings of Catholic University fives.

Duke will bring a well-seasoned squad of juniors and seniors who contributed to a very successful season last year when the Blue Devils won seven out of eight North Carolina Big Five Conference games, and 17 of 20 altogether.

The Catholic University team opens its season unofficially tomorrow at 3 p. m. with the alumni. Between halves there will be three boxing exhibitions involving Cardinal ring candidates. This double sports program was well received last year. Admission price for both is 25 cents, and the proceeds will be poured into the annual May 1 dinner fund.

Champion Roosevelt Five Rallies to Win 1st Game, 27-22

Baltimore City College Is Defeated

Frank Ciango Hero Of Fourth Period Rally by D. C. High School Basketers

Eight "money" points by Frankie Ciango, Roosevelt High forward, in the last quarter, accounted for the 1939-40 interhigh cage champions' first triumph of the season yesterday, a 27-22 beating of Baltimore City College on the local floor.

With the Rough Riders trailing by 18-17 going into the final session, Ciango hit the cords four times to take credit for all but two of Roosevelt's last-period points. Capt. Hymie Perlo tallied the other 2-pointer on a perfect set shot.

Ciango Leads Scorers

In all Ciango, playing his second year with the Riders, rang up 11 points to lead the scoring. Perlo was forced to share second honors with B. C. C.'s forward, Working, each with 7 points.

Beaten by Bethesda - Chevy Chase's terrific late drive in their opener, Roosevelt players were almost on the wrong end of another rally yesterday. At half time they had led throughout, and an 11-to-6 margin belonged to them. It lasted only about three minutes of the third period, however, as Working, Klein and O'Neill gave Baltimore C. C. a 17-to-15 edge. The quarter closed with the invaders leading, 16 to 17, on the strength of Schmitt's charity toss. From that point on Ciango was in charge.

Baltimore Five Taller

Height favored the Baltimore quintet, but Roosevelt failed to let it matter. Tommy Robertson and Perlo paced the eventual winners in the first two periods as they broke a 5-to-5 deadlock and gained their half-time edge.

A preliminary also went to the host school, Roosevelt reserves giving Greenbelt High its second straight beating at the hands of a local public school, 20 to 15. Redinger and Morton registered six points apiece for the winners, but Greenbelt's Egli was high for the game with 10.

Eagles Battle Orioles to Tie Before 4,082

Baltimore Six Comes From Behind, Gains Overtime Deadlock

Ceryance, of the Orioles, prevented Washington from practically clinching the victory in the opening 20 minutes of play. The Eagles were driving into the attacking zone consistently, but although they experienced little trouble in eluding the Orioles' defensemen, they found shooting the puck through Ceryance something of a problem. The tall Oriole net tender, who plays in a cap, made extraordinary stops off Mailley, Burns and Rossignol, as well as others of a less brilliant nature.

Ceryance, however, couldn't stave off Burns' shot at 9:27, which whizzed into the nets from a sharp angle in the left lane after Dewey had helped the big center advance the puck into scoring territory.

A Rough Session

Despite stern warnings from league officials the first period was rough, five penalties being dished out, three of them against the Orioles.

Porky (Spike) Wychnenka led Baltimore's second-period comeback which netted three goals and a 3-1 lead for the Orioles as the Eagles continued to find it a mountainous task to get the puck by Goalie Ceryance.

Wychnenka, a barrel-like winger, counted twice, both times being assisted by Ripley, and Riley accounted for an unassisted goal to round out the Baltimore scoring.

Wychnenka tied the count at 1-1 when he whacked in a shot while skating fast down the left lane after Ripley had intercepted a Washington pass and fed him the puck just inside the attacking zone. The goal was made at 3:55.

Riley Sends One Home

Less than a minute later Riley tallied on a nicely executed one-man sortie on which he feinted Defense McTeer, of the Eagles, almost off the ice to bang one by Hemming. Covered by McTeer as he skated straight down the middle, Riley faked a pass to Kenney Partis, who was on his left, and, on the second fake, he shot hard and true through Hemming, whose vision was screened by the 230-pound bulk of McTeer.

Washington threatened mildly in the next ten minutes, especially when Baltimore lost Defense Dyte for two minutes on a tripping penalty, but couldn't succeed in scoring, and at 16:30 Wychnenka ended the point famine with his second goal of the period. This culminated in a fine play in which Dill and Ripley collaborated. Dill started the drive, scooping up a free puck and passing it to Ripley, who, in turn, connected with Wychnenka as he swooped toward the center of the nets, and then veered sharply to the right, backhanding the goal as he cut away.

Gonzaga, G. W. High Fives Win in Twin Bill

Woodrow Wilson Drops 36-35 Game to Purple as Alexandria School Beats St. John's, 27-22

Their first basketball promotional effort of the season resulted in an even break for Washington's Catholic high fives last night, Gonzaga winning its end of the twin bill from Woodrow Wilson, 36-35, and St. John's bowing to a clever club from George Washington High, of Alexandria, by a 27-22 count.

Approximately 1,000 hardy fans turned out at Tech gym despite an icy drizzle.

By far the most exciting of the battles was the opener, involving a Gonzaga quintet that had won its only other start and a Wilson team that had lost its previous game. There was never more than 5 points separating the clubs, and it took a dazzling basket by the Purple's Franny Counsilman in the last 30 seconds of play to decide.

Counsilman, as a matter of fact, was the difference between a winning and losing performance for Gonzaga. He turned in exactly half of his team's points, 18, and most of them came when needed most.

The surprisingly well-balanced fives went into the final period tied up at 27-27, but before the final whistle the lead had switched hands four times in a wild wind-up. The last 6 points of the game were the sole property of Counsilman, one of three veterans on the Purple squad.

By the narrow margin of one point Gonzaga led after the first and second quarters, 8-7 and 17-16, as baskets were matched. The Purple rushed into a 25-20 lead with 3 minutes of the third quarter gone, but again Wilson, behind the brilliant floor work of Eddie Polhamus and Bob Bedell, came up to deadlock matters. It was the last-mentioned players who paced the Presidents, turning in 10 and 11 points, respectively.

Though it lacked nothing in "fight," St. John's was forced to trail almost from the start as it dropped its first game of the season. From midway of the first period, when G. W.'s Leon Chisolm broke a 3-3 tie with a circus shot from the foul line, the Johnnies were never ahead. They were behind, 8-3, at the quarter, 12-7 at the half, and 19-13 after three stanzas.

Points by Jack Cooke, Don Brown and Dick Hathaway as the final period started brought the St. John's deficit to only 19-18, but the rush was short-lived, and the Alexandrians went ahead to win almost as they pleased.

High point honors went to G. W.'s Chisolm, with 12, but Hathaway turned in 9 for the losers before going out via the personal foul rule in the final quarter.

The game was rough enough to necessitate the calling of a total of 30 fouls, 14 against St. John's and 16 against George Washington.

Eagles Test Plays Against Vols' Defense

By the Associated Press

Newton, Mass., Dec. 13.—The Sugar Bowl-bound Boston College Eagles romped almost at will today when they tested their running attack against the Tennessee-type defenses demonstrated by their freshman forces.

Coach Frank Leahy, who is convinced his players need plenty of contact work, was more than satisfied by his charges' performances during their second consecutive scrimmage. The Eagles scored a total of five touchdowns but their pleasure over that success was tempered by the fact that the freshmen also countered after putting on Tennessee's plays for 20 minutes.

Leahy had all his regulars in action, except Gene Goodreault, the right end, who spent the afternoon baking his injured knee. Sophomore Don Currivan filled in for him.

When Leahy supervised the varsity-freshman action, his aides pitted the second and third teams against each other in various dummy drills.

It is likely that the Eagles, who will head for New Orleans next Wednesday, will scrimmage here every day until then, weather permitting.

Moorefield, W. Va., Dec. 13.—Coaches and principals of the high schools in Pendleton, Grant and Hardy Counties and of Romney, Hampshire County, will request the West Virginia State board of athletics to sanction the formation of the Upper Potomac League Conference, action having been taken at a meeting in Petersburg. Schools besides Romney, in the proposed conference will be Circleville and Franklin, Pendleton County; Bayard and Petersburg, Grant county, and Moorefield, Mathias and Wardensville, Hardy County.

Should the change be made in conference lines the annual basketball tournament would be held at Moorefield. The purpose of the proposed conference is to equalize competition in football, basketball and baseball as all of the schools are class B schools in enrollment.

Chevy Chase Takes Third In Row, 33-24

B.-C. C. Quintet Beats Central in Fast Game, Overcoming Foes' Lead

The fighting basketball forces of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High made it three in a row yesterday as they hung a 33-24 beating on Central in a torrid struggle on the Barons' court.

Though it boasted an opening victory over Greenbelt High, Central was a whipped club after the second quarter yesterday. It had led, 9-8, going into the session but that margin had evaproated and Bethesda held a 13-12 edge at intermission.

Fourteen points the Barons scored in the third period, limiting Central to six. The disadvantage was too much for the Vikings and Bethesda won almost as it pleased.

Tall, quiet Bob Lebling was high scorer of the game, contributing 10 important points to the Bethesda cause. The Barons' Dick Poerstal and Central's Charley Kligman ran second with eight apiece.

Eastern Takes Second Victory; Beats W. & L.

White Tide Holds 14-2 Edge at Half; Richie Poston Stars

Using its full squad of 13 players in defiance of the fact it was Friday the thirteenth, Eastern High captured its second straight basketball victory of the year yesterday, trouncing Washington-Lee High in Arlington by a 26-16 count.

The White Tide was never threatened by a Little General club seeing its first action with Coach Elwood Clements in charge. It held W. and L. scoreless in the opening period as it scored eight points, and ran up a 14-2 edge at the half with only Forward Gudger able to tally for the hosts.

Safely out in front as the final session started, Eastern staged a ball-handling exhibition that lasted 3½ minutes before the Little Generals could get the ball.

Slender Ritchie Poston, half of the Tide's set of twins, provided, the fanciest scoring performance of the game. In slightly over two periods, Poston hit the basket for four field goals and as many foul shots for a total of 12. Neil Craig, of Eastern, and W.-L.'s Gaumitz tied for second honors with five points each.

Anacostians Beaten, 25-20, By Hyattsville

Victors Come From Behind; Vesperman And Kidwell Stars

Anacostia High cagemen made their debut under the coaching of "Zip" Lehr yesterday at Hyattsville, but it was hardly a happy one. Hyattsville took a 25-20 victory after an up and down struggle.

In registering their second triumph in three starts, Hyattsville's stalwarts were forced to come from behind several times to win. After one quarter they trailed, 5-3, and at the half they were still behind, 11-10. With Roland Kidwell and Paul Vesperman leading the attack, they romped into a 17-15 margin going into the last period and kept it safe.

Kidwell and Vesperman shared scoring honors for the winners, while the only consistent point-maker for the losers was Leukhardt, lanky forward. He tallied 12 points as only four Indian players scored.

From the opening tip-off it was a rough game. Fouling cost Anacostia the most, for Leukhardt was forced out with several crucial minutes of play remaining.

Rangers Lose To Red Wings

By International News Service

Detroit, Dec. 13.—In a bruising game featured by 11 penalties and 2 first-class fist fights, the Detroit Red Wings outlasted the New York Rangers tonight to win a 3-2 overtime decision before 8,786 frenzied Olympia Stadium fans.

Seven men were lodged in the penalty box in the closing moments of the third period as the Rangers came back to score the tying goal and send the game into the overtime session.

Even Referee Bill Stewart was injured and had to leave the ice briefly after receiving a skate cut on his leg during the last-period melee, which started when Eddie Wares, of the Wings, and Dutch Hiller, of the Rangers, started throwing fists.

Don Grosso won the game for Detroit in 5:21 of the extra session when he rammed a beautiful screen shot past Dave Kerr after taking a slick relay from Wares and Jack Stewart.

Gus Giesebrecht and Walter Juzda started the fisticuffs late in the second frame and while they were cooling off in the penalty box, Jack Stewart powered through the Ranger defense and took a shot from Wares to score in 16:26 and give Detroit a 1-to-0 lead.

Clint Smith tied it up in 8:13 of the third period on a pass from Art Heller, but Ebbie Goodfellow put the Wings ahead in 10:14 again when he batted in Alex Motter's rebound. Lyn Patrick scored the tying goal for the Rangers in 18:40.

Pimlico Lady Shatters Record Winning at Charles Town

Turns Course In 1:14 3-5; Brings $7.20

Here Goes Is Second, Two and a Half Lengths Back, With Randle's Queen 3d

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 13.—Running like a scared rabbit in the front of her field, Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer's Pimlico Lady sent into discard the much-equalled track record for the Charles Town course (130 feet more than 6 furlongs). Urged along by Jockey W. L. Taylor, the daughter of Okapi and Tulane Maid handled her 114-pound assignment like a champion and won by two and a half lengths. B. F. Christmas' fleet Here Goes, holder of another sprint record here, was second by a fat neck over Randle's Queen, recently purchased by Mrs. Gladys Auld from U. S. Randle, of Washington.

Pimlico Lady clipped three-fifths of a second off the oval mark in recording time of 1:14 3-5. The old mark, shared by Pimlico Lady as the result of her previous start at this meeting, was 1:15 1-5, originally set two years ago by Lady Buck and later equalled by Consistent, Blablah and Berwyn as well as today's winner. Pimlico Lady paid $7.20.

Open Betting Affair

The race, known as the Hillsboro Purse, was a rather open betting affair and involved six starters. Taylor had to do a little booting to get Pimlico Lady to the top at the first turn and she slightly bothered Here Goes in doing so. From that point to the wire, however, Pimlico Lady was not seriously threatened. Taylor, riding his only winner of the day, kept pumping. He never let up in the closing stages, either. Here Goes made game bids in back of the flying pacemaker but was all out to hold the place money from Randle's Queen.

A light rain last night only served to lay the dust on the track and the running surface has seldom been in as good shape. The sky was at the sagging point throughout the afternoon but there was no precipitation.

The Hanover Purse, located fifth on the program, was a "killer-diller" for the favorite players.

Favorite Collapses

The crowd went to a lot of trouble to make Weatherite a heavy favorite in the test of six and a half furlongs. For six furlongs the daughter of Prince of Wales was worthy of the backing but in the stretch she collapsed, finally staggering into third position behind Rippling On and Jerisa. As far as could be seen, the riders did not claim a foul against Weatherite but the stewards called up Jockey C. Kirk, who rode Weatherite and Taylor who rode Miss Omega.

After a conference, it was decided that Weatherite had foulded Miss Omega and the favorite's number was taken off the result's board. Omega, meaning "the end" and the day being "Friday the thirteenth" the favorite players beefed only mildly.

Rippling On, under Jockey Willie Kelley's handling, paid $11. This was Kelly's second winner of the day, the boy having turned back the fourth race field with Vendor's Lien.

Trainer J. W. Camac sent a fit Eltonhead out to win the second race and pave the way for a $23.60 pay-off in the daily double. The Flag Day gelding led Butterman and Questre to the wire and paid $8.80. G. P. Sherman's Custer, also paid $6.80 as the winner of the third race. In this affair, the winner downed, among others Dustless and Frank H.

VENDOR'S LIEN, keen forward factor from start, disposed of NAVIGATION when coming to outside of pacemaker on backstretch, assumed good lead and was kept to drive to end. RODEF was in first flight from start and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. HAREBELL, slowest to begin, closed a gap. MONK'S SHADOW was held safe.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIPPLING ON, $11.00, $5.20, $3.40; JERISA, $4.60, $3.20; MISS OMEGA, $9.40.

RIPPLING ON, in first flight from start, escaped interference entering stretch and responded to strong handling to barely last ahead of JERISA'S closing drive. JERISA was within striking distance from start, came wide for racing room and closed with bold rush. WEATHERITE drew far out, saved ground, tired suddenly and swerved in front of MISS OMEGA for which she was disqualified. MISS OMEGA was hustled going to first turn, was closest to pacemaker to stretch and hung after being blocked.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. The Hillsboro. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:11. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. H. S. PIMLICO LADY took command at first turn, opened long lead, saved ground and was kept to hand drive to end. HERE GOES was lightly bothered by winner at first turn, was vigorously handled and closed with good energy. RANDLE'S QUEEN could not keep up early, came willingly in closing stages and finished under punishment. BEAULLENE was strongly handled and had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:43. Off 4:43½. Winner, J. E. Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

The meeting will not be extended. It was officially announced yesterday that the session would close as scheduled on December 21. Although the Charles Town Jockey Club did not make application for an extension, local businessmen, aiming at the holiday trade, asked the West Virginia Racing Commission to allow the meeting to go until January 1. The track took no part in the move, although it had assured petitioners that it would cooperate if the dates were granted. For the second straight Sunday there will not be a professional football game in Washington. U. S. Randle has sold his two race horses, Randle's Queen and Deodo, to Mrs. Gladys Auld, of Washington. She is the wife of A. K. Auld, who has been training these horses. Charles Gormley, patrol judge, celebrated his thirty-sixth birthday. Five daily doubles have paid more than $150 during the meeting. Last Saturday's $508 was the best. Favorites are doing better than I realized. While they haven't clicked at the 36.97 pace of last summer's meeting, a check-up on the first ten days shows 22 of 70 choices stepped home for a mark of 31.42. In addition, 21 have finished second with a shade under .73 "in the money." Although I seem to recall many beaten odds-on favorites, 8 out of 13 have gotten home on top. The height of something or other was reached here yesterday when a race was split into sections and there still was 100 excluded, meaning that 128 horses tried to get into one race. The old and the new meet down on Washington Street where a parking meter and a hitching post stand side by side. The new bugler, Earl Manuel, is trying. He sneaked up on the call for yesterday's fifth race and messed up the middle, but finished strongly. Abner Risler, the boy who did the job for years, was the tops. The Charles Town High School Band supplies the lads. The stewards finally got around to making a disqualification yesterday, taking Weatherite out of third position. The "objection" sign was not lighted and the fans were kept in the dark. The first the customers, who did not see the boys go into the stands, knew about it was when the show numbers were changed. Weatherite was a tired, staggering horse and out of control of her rider. Breezing Along and Credence, not disqualified, were tired and in control of their riders when they fouled. What's the story? See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Roman Boy, diked out with 118 pounds, appears headed for an easy victory. He should run away and hide from this kind. Eltonheads, if sent back, should take the place award. Time Her may have needed that last and is dangerous.

Second race—Silver Beam has worked well and turned in a good effort after being messed up in the early stages. Needs only to get off the reserve list. Westing has plenty of speed and gets in this with a feather assignment. Mariyah may be the best of the others.

Third race — Balkanese seems suited by conditions in this field. The 106 pounds appears right and I'm going to string. Quick Vine is fit and ready for a test of this kind. Golden Key's last was encouraging.

Fourth race—Stop Scout was off poorly and was beaten by a narrow margin last out. Easter Holiday holds track record here and is dangerous in this company. Poorly handled last out. Jink Buster won here and is a threat.

Fifth race—Five previous winners clash to make this an open race. It is a guessing race. Match Point gets my call. Dark Beau probably needed that last and should improve. Pamunkey gained a set of brackets in that last try and promises to be right there.

Sixth race—Soldierette, winner of two over this track, should make it three in a row. Seems to have it on the horses gathered for this. Royal Business is fit as hands make horses, but probably needs a longer route. Red Wrack for the minor award. Mud would give Dixzy Dame a chance at the featherweight.

Seventh race—Lauerman showed a fair effort last out and deserves a top ranking in company of this brand. Voldear is good now and should be a keen contender. Jinneal may be the third one.

Substitute race—If No. 1 is used, I'll take Deodo, Mighty Busy and Bob Junior. If No. 2 is used, I'll take Brook Herrod, Abbot's Lark and Bubbleworth.

Best bet—Roman Boy.

Conklin Picks:

CHARLES TOWN

Indian Trade Quiets Talk Of New 'Purge

Peckinpaugh Ready to Start Season With His Present Set-Up

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Dec. 13.—The trading of three "nonrebels" to the Boston Red Sox today quelled talk in baseball circles about a Cleveland "purge" of the players who openly revolted against Manager Oscar Vitt last summer.

Pitcher Joe Dobson and Infielder Odell Hale, two of the players sent East in the swap for Outfielder Gerry Walker, Pitcher Jim Bagby, jr., and Catcher Gene Desautels, were the most docile members of the turbulent Indians.

Big Squawker Gone

Catcher Frankie Pytlak, the third chattel in the deal, was a perennial holdout and his troubles with President Alva Bradley nullified any weight he could carry with his owner in seeking the ouster of Vitt.

Vitt was finally fired and replaced by Roger Peckinpaugh this fall as the outgrowth of the rebellion, which found 12 players personally carrying their demands to Bradley.

Peckinpaugh spiked new transactions and the elimination of the "rebels" by commenting:

"This trade gives us a strong, well-balanced club. I'd be satisfied to start the season with what we have right now. Unless some club comes to us with a proposition we we can't turn down, we are through trading."

Fans Okay Barter

The deal leaves only Pitcher Mel Harder and First Baseman Hal Trosky from the team Peckinpaugh handed over to Walter Johnson in mid-1933 when he was fired as Cleveland manager.

Cleveland fans generally praised the barter. Harder said:

"It looks like a swell deal. Walker was just the man we needed."

Peckinpaugh said he expected to start the season with Walker, Roy Weatherly and Jeff Heath in the outfield. The club has three other gardeners—Ben Chapman, Beau Bell and Clarence Campbell—and one of them, probably Chapman, will be sold or traded.

Coaches Shaughnessy, Jones Not Superstitious

Lincoln, Nebr. Dec. 13 (AP).—It's Friday the 13th and this little item is just to show that Coaches Lawrence M. Jones, of Nebraska, and Clark Shaughnessy, of Stanford, Rose Bowl opponents, aren't walking around with crossed fingers.

You simply can't be superstitious when you let the quarterbacks of your teams wear jersey No. 13. And that is just what signal callers Roy Petsch, of Nebraska, and Frankie Albert, of Stanford, do.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 13 (AP).—The election of Midshipman T. Turner, Pisgah, Ala., as captain of the Navy 1941 cross-country team was announced today by Capt. T. Starr King, director of athletics.

Midshipman R. M. Richards, Camden, S. C., was elected manager.

Dartmouth-Cornell Game Tops Upset Poll

Football Battle With Fifth-Down Incident And Switch of Final Score Biggest Upset Of Year; Detroit Tigers' Victory Is Hailed

By Whitney Martin

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Dec. 13.—The fading year offered its share of eye-openers for the sports fans, but when the country's sports editors had finished contributing to the list of upsets for the Associated Press poll two events overshadowed the field.

In first place with 72 points, including 14 first-place votes, was the Dartmouth-Cornell game, in which the now famed fifth-down incident resulted in a switching of the final score, with Cornell going on record as the loser, 3 to 0, after apparently winning the game, 7 to 3.

Tigers Surprise

Pressing that surprise for top-notchers—in fact, gathering one more first-place vote although the total was only 64 points, based on the 3-2-1 rating—was the Detroit Tigers victory in the American League. The Tigers had been picked to finish far down the list by most experts, and they not only won out, but carried the Cincinnati Reds to seven games in the World Series.

Sixteen events were considered worthy of first place by one or more experts, and in all there were 46 events deemed as rating a first, second or third-place vote.

Tied for third place with 31 points each were the defeat of Bimelech by Gallahadion in the Kentucky Derby, and Stanford's sensational football season after its one-victory year of 1939.

Texas' 7 to 0 football victory over Texas A. and M. was next in line with 28 points, and another football game—Iowa's astonishing 7 to 0 triumph over then unbeaten Notre Dame—polled just 2 points less.

Oliver Disqualified

Golf then edged into the picture with seven voters considering Ed Oliver's disqualification in the National Open for starting ahead of time worthy of first place. The Oliver incident was good for 23 points, one more than collapse of the New York Yankees after they had been picked overwhelmingly to again finish in front in the American League.

The fight game came next, with Fritzie Zivic's victory over Henry Armstrong polling 19 points, including a brace of first-place votes. Billy Soose's triumph over two middleweight champions within a month without winning a title didn't poll a first-place vote, but it gathered 14 points to rank right behind the Zivic-Armstrong incident.

Football—there were 12 grid games considered worthy for the list of major upsets—came back into the picture with the Chicago Bears' 73-0 victory over the Washington Redskins drawing 13 points.

Fort Worth Drafts Opelousas Pitcher

Durham, N. C., Dec. 13 (AP).—Exercising its right under the deferred-selection rule of baseball, Fort Worth, of the Texas League, has drafted Pitcher Louis Bauer from Opelousas, La., of the Evangeline loop, National Association headquarters announced today.

Opelousas failed to file its draft list as required in September, and under baseball law all players on the club roster are subject to unrestricted draft during specified periods for each classification during the month of December.

Bauer, a righthander, won 13 and lost 15 games for Opelousas during the 1940 season.

Cut in Night Ball Blamed On N. League

Browns' Owner Also Aims Statement at Cards' Sam Breadon

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Dec. 13.—Donald L. Barnes, president of the American League Browns, issued a statement today blaming "the direct efforts of the National League" for the Browns' failure to get permission to play 14 night games again next season.

His statement also was aimed at Sam Breadon, president of the National League Cardinals, who he said had switched positions by voting to curtail night baseball to seven games.

From 1935, when the National League Cincinnati Reds inaugurated night games in the majors, Barnes said the subject had been a matter for individual league control. Neither league, he added, consulted the other regarding rules and regulations, although both limited their teams to seven home appearances under lights.

Last season, after consulting with Breadon, Barnes applied to the American League and was given permission to play 14 games. The National League denied a similar request by Breadon.

At the joint meeting in Chicago last Wednesday, the National League proposed a rule limiting all teams to seven night games at home. The American League voted against it, but Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis cast the deciding vote in favor of the rule.

Barnes said Breadon made the statement at the meeting that the Cardinals did not desire to play more than seven games. Breadon and Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals, both presented arguments "to the effect that 28 night games in any city would ruin the daytime attendance," Barnes said.

In turn, Barnes contended because of the increase in employment under the national defense program, night baseball would be more in demand in all major league cities. He pointed out that fans with regular daytime jobs are unable to attend afternoon games.

Joey Archibald In Final Drill Here Today

Billy Banks Also To Complete Training For Monday Fight

Joey Archibald, the little Pawtuckett, R. I., featherweight, will put the finishing touches to three weeks of steady training this afternoon at Huron, where he will stage a public workout at 2 o'clock for his eight-round bout with Billy Banks, Washington colored ace, Monday night at the enlarged Turner's Arena.

Archibald's one-time sparmate, Banks, also will complete his training at Huron, working at 1 p. m.

Charlie Goldman, Archibald's trainer, termed the odds of 6-5 in favor of Banks as ridiculous," and predicted that Joey would have no trouble in beating the brown-skinned boy.

"You can't judge a fighter on his work in training," Goldman pointed out yesterday. "All right, so Joey was given a busy session by this Banks when he worked for Jeffra, but what of it! When the chips are down, and the pressure on, Joey is right there. That's why he's won 10 straight matches in Washington."

Banks breezed through a fast workout yesterday, going at a dizzy clip with Marcus Pitte, another local boy, who fought Jeffra twice and was beaten by Billy Banks the last time they met. Pitte is predicting an easy victory for Banks over Archibald.

Billy Edwards, the one-time fighter who has been training little Willie since he started fighting as an amateur at the age of 15, said Banks was down to 126 pounds and was hitting harder than ever. Edwards said that Banks is showing vast improvement in his "set" punches, which are calculated to give Archibald lots of trouble Monday.

Archibald will receive $750—highest guarantee in the history of the Arena—while Banks is coming in for a small percentage. Billy realizes that victory definitely will make him a headliner, and will give him a promised shot at Harry Jeffra.

Willie Hoppe Named Top Player of 1940

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—The National Billiard Association today named its No. 1 player of the year—Willie Hoppe, of New York.

Hoppe, who rode a spectacular 20-game victory string to the 1940 three-cushion tournament championship, also was rated first in the three-cushion and the all-around divisions.

Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, was named first in the pocket billiard division and second in all-around play.

Hoppe succeeded Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, as the Nation's No. 1 cue expert.

Yule Buying Continues at Record Pace

Fifth Reserve District Sales Increase 16% In Dec. 7 Week

With a spurt of 16 per cent in department store sales, the Fifth Federal Reserve District in the week ended December 7 showed the sharpest increase in the Nation over last year. The Fifth District includes Washington.

For the country the Federal Reserve Board estimates that department store sales in the week ended December 7 were 5 per cent more than in the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended November 30, sales had been 6 per cent above last year, and in the four weeks ended December 7, they averaged 7 per cent more than a year ago.

By Federal Reserve districts, increases for the week ended December 7 over the corresponding week last year were:

Boston, 3; New York, 4; Philadelphia, 2; Cleveland, 5; Richmond, 16; Atlanta, 11; Chicago, 8; St. Louis, 6; Kansas City, 6, and Dallas, 5 per cent.

In the San Francisco district, however, sales were 2 per cent under a year ago. No figure was given for the Minneapolis area.

Increases Are General

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—Christmas gift buying throughout the nation this week rose to the best levels in several years, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Expanding sales tended to confirm predictions of the Department of Commerce that Christmas gift buying this year, both from the standpoint of unit turnover and dollar volume, might be the largest in history.

General buying of all types of merchandise on the week averaged between 7 and 10 per cent above a year ago for the country as a whole.

"Retail trade gained momentum rapidly as Christmas buying neared its crest," said Dun & Bradstreet. "City retailers lengthened store hours to handle the heavy influx of customers. The week's business was said to be widely distributed, with home furnishings continuing to vie for the spotlight with traditional gift lines.

"Holiday buying still stressed gifts of utility value. The increased emphasis on better-quality goods was noted in all types of merchandise, with the trend especially marked in stores catering to the wage-earner trade.

"Active gift lines this week were luggage sets, umbrellas, lingerie, men's furnishings, toys and leather goods. Many stores rated handbags and gloves as leaders in main floor departments.

"In children's wear, demand was particularly good for snow suits, sweaters and mittens. Women's apparel departments for the most part had best results in furs, sportswear and evening wear, with furs continuing in the leading position.

"In home furnishings, occasional furniture pieces were most prominent. There was sustained activity in floor coverings, with stress on carpets and small rugs, and in radio sets."

Particularly strong sales in groceries and automobiles were noted in many parts of the country.

In wholesale markets, buying by merchants continued to taper off seasonally, but in many lines the tone of trading "was much more active than usual for this time of the year," the agency added.

Cotton Futures

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—The cotton futures market today was impressed with the orderly fashion the open interest in the spot month was liquidated and bid prices up 2 to 5 points.

December went off the board at noon at 10.18 cents a pound, or 6 points higher.

Brisk demand developed from trade and mill interests. Mill accounts were credited with buying about 10,000 bales early, believed to be covering against large Government orders for textiles. Hedges were lifted on cotton recently sold to Russia.

A driblet of Bombay offerings came through at the opening.

Sears dominated both trade, Worth Street said, placing the week's sales of this item sharply above current production. Elsewhere turnover was slow.

Reports Thursday, 11,543 bales; season so far, 842,021; port receipts, 37,390; port stocks, 3,337,601.

Gold Imports Rise in Month To $330,112,851

The Commerce Department said yesterday that gold imports climbed a little in November to $330,112,851, about $5,000,000 more than October.

The British Empire, which uses gold as its principal method of paying for war supplies in the United States, was as usual the principal shipper. Canada sent $262,721,000; Australia, $14,441,000; South Africa, $6,182,000, and India, $2,170,392.

Other major shipments were $15,462,000 from South America, including $12,984,000 from Argentina and $1,047,624 from Chili. Japan sent $12,188,000 and Portugal, $9,286,000.

Silver imports totaled $4,721,230, almost the same as October, and included $2,237,000 from Mexico, $1,279,000 from Japan, $456,000 from Peru and $318,000 from Canada.

Although most of the imported gold was sold to the United States Treasury, some was added to foreign deposits of gold under earmark in the Federal Reserve Banks. This kind of metal increased $39,494,614 to a total of $1,815,089,514.

U. S. Court Enjoins Bank Stock Sale

San Francisco, Dec. 13 (AP).—Federal Judge Albert F. Sames granted the Securities Commission an injunction today against Timetrust, Inc., forbidding sale of any more Bank of America stock.

Judge Sames ruled the commission had shown that Timetrust and other defendants had "stabilized" the market price of the bank stock, but had failed to disclose that fact to purchasers.

Stocks Rise Briskly in Heavy Turnover; Steels and Utilities in Best Demand

New York, Dec. 13.—Strength continued in parts of today's stock market but many leaders lacked rising vigor. Hesitancy at the start faded when bidding came in for steels, utilities, amusements and an assortment of senior issues. Gains ran to 2 points or so at the top although these were reduced or canceled in some cases at the close.

Activity was pronounced at intervals and transfers of 961,450 shares were the largest since November 15. They compared with 781,410 yesterday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 44.3 but still was under the 45.7 mark of a month ago.

The list again was confronted with light year-end tax selling throughout the session, and the ability of the market as a whole to overcome this impediment was encouraging to bullish forces. Of 850 individual issues traded, 423 were up, 219 down and 208 unchanged.

Except for the persistent Nazi air bombing of English industrial centers, the war news was viewed as more constructive, marketwise. While there was scant alteration in the domestic business picture, hopefulness here remained as an anti-bearish argument. A number of senior stocks still were responsive to the outlook for additional payments on accumulated dividends.

Liveliest performer of the day was Commonwealth & Southern, which opened on a block of 70,800 shares, unchanged at the year's low of ¾. This was believed to have represented a tax sale. The stock improved later and finished up 1-16 at 13-16.

An increase in this week's automotive output, unusual at this time of year, failed to stimulate the motors.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem bounded up in the forenoon on prospects of near-capacity mill operations next week. They backed away at the last and ended down ⅛ each.

Getting into new high ground for 1940 were Crucible Steel common and preferred, White Motors, Paramount Pictures and American Shipbuilding.

Emerging on the upside were Republic Steel, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Warner Bros., International Telephone, Universal Pictures preferred, Loew's, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Consolidated Edison, North American, Nickel Plate preferred and Kennecott.

The better action of utilities and moving picture company issues was believed based partly on the theory these were "oversold." The film stocks also were benefited by reports of expanding box office receipts. Estimates of a sharp pickup in Christmas shopping propped some merchandising shares.

Among losers were American Telephone, Standard Oil of N. J., Douglas Aircraft, Great Northern, General Motors, General Electric and U. S. Gypsum.

Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was off ¾ of a cent a bushel to up ⅛ and corn down ⅜ to ¾. Cotton gained 10 to 30 cents a bale.

In the Curb advances of as much as a point or so were recorded for American Gas, Bath Iron Works, Jones & Laughlin, Bell Aircraft, Electric Bond & Share and Sherwin Williams. The turnover here was around 310,000 shares versus 187,000 Thursday.

Business Highlights

Prepared for The Post by Standard Statistics

Oil Burner Backlog Heavy

Unfilled orders for domestic oil burners totaled 8,607 at the end of September, an increase of 4.2% as compared with the corresponding 1939 figure. Shipments during the month were 17.4% larger than in September, 1939, while new orders showed a year-to-year increase of 15.5%. The trend probably turned downward in October, for September has marked the peak for both orders and shipments in every recent year. However, October probably brought no sharp contraction, and business may hold up rather well through the current month. The oil burner trade is one that benefits directly and immediately from the high level of residential building.

Exports Recover

Figures on foreign trade for October have done much to dispel the uncertainty created by the disappointing September statistics. Merchandise exports for October totaled $336,000,000, which compares with $328,000,000 in September and $323,000,000 in October, 1939. Because of the sharp drop in September exports to the lowest for any month of the year, there was a fear that shipping losses might have reached a point where foreign trade had been crippled for an indefinite period ahead. The return of October exports to the 1940 average, however, has been reassuring, not only from the standpoint of business, but also because of its bearing on the outcome of the war and on the ability of this Nation to obtain the shipping needed to meet our import requirements.

Farm Income Up Sharply

The increase in October from income was somewhat greater than seasonal. The total for the month was $1,125,000,000 (including $76,000,000 in benefit payments), which compares with $908,000,000 in September and $1,042,000,000 in October, 1939. Because of the unusually heavy sales of farm products in October, there may be a greater than seasonal decline in farm income during November and December. However, the total for these months should be about as large as in the final two months of 1939. In contrast, income in most of the industrial areas of the Nation will be well above that in the closing months of 1939.

Less Emphasis on Price

One of the leading automobile manufacturers reports that whereas 24.8 per cent of its sales of 1940 models were eights, some 35 per cent of its deliveries thus far in the 1941 model season have been of the more expensive eight-cylinder models. The fact that this company has narrowed the price spread between the sixes and eights undoubtedly but it is also evident taht the auto buying public is putting less emphasis on price than it did last year. Such a trend, if widespread and continued, could add considerably to automobile manufacturers' gross and net during the current model year.

Yardstick for Banks

The announcement by the RFC that it would extend loans to national defense contractors at 1½ per cent interest under the new "bankable" contract is significant in several respects. First, to the extent that it lessens the role likely to be played by banks in handling borrowing demands, it will tend to force the banks, particularly the smaller ones, to invest more heavily in Governments. Second, it shows Government policy directed at further expansion of Federal control of the credit machinery. Third, it seemingly assures extension of the era of low interest rates.

Chemical Use, Production Set All-Time High

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Dec. 13.—Producing and consuming branches of the chemical industry have operated at the highest levels in history in the last two months, Chemical & Metallurgical Engineering said today.

The magazine said the holiday-shortened working period in November, accounted for declines in output as compared with October, although the rate of operations in many industries were higher in November.

"Steel mills worked on a rising scale," the magazine said, "but oil refining was more pronounced in the early part of Dcember but most of the other consuming industries were reported working at an unusually high rate and it is certain that the 12-month figures will establish the chemical industry at an all-time high."

The Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering index for chemical consumption stood at 154.28 for October and at 151 for November. The high points previously reached were in October, 1939 and March, 1937 with indexes of 146.51 and 148.45 respectively. The index for November, 1939 was 143.50.

London Stocks

London, Dec. 13 (AP).—The stock market closed generally dull today chiefly because of interest associated with week-end influences. The underlying sentiment continued cheerful, however, on satisfactory war news.

Profit-takers were active in late dealings in oils. Some irregularity was noted.

The gilt-edged group was quiet and steady. Egyptian issues were prominent. Greek bonds advanced ½ point, and interest in Portuguese liens revived in the foreign bond division.

Industrial stocks moved narrowly with a tendency to lower levels except electrical supply shares, which showed many gains, and heavy industry issues, which were firmer.

Domestic rails were steady and quiet. Kaffirs improved.

Appalachian Offering Heads List in Size; More in Prospect

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—Roughly $160,000,000 in new securities arrived in the market today for investors' inspection and at least $78,000,000 more was scheduled for the near future.

Appalachian Electric Power Co. offered through a national syndicate headed by Bonbright & Co., $70,000,000 first mortgage 3¼ per cent series bonds, due 1970, at $107. Also offered were 300,000 shares of 4½ per cent cumulative preferred stock at $106, part of which was subject to an exchange offer tendered holders of the company's $7 and $6 preferred. In addition to the public financing, the parent company, American Gas & Electric Co., will contribute $30,670,473 in cash.

The Appalachian financing will provide $134,674,378 to be applied toward redemption of outstanding securities.

Mellon Securities Corporation headed a syndicate which offered $25,000,000 of 1½ per cent tax anticipation notes of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania at a figure to yield .15 of 1 per cent. The issue is payable in six months.

The Port of New York Authority issued a call for sealed bids to be opened next Tuesday on a new issue of $27,750,000 general and refunding bonds. The bonds will carry a 3 per cent coupon, due in 1975, and will be known as the sixth series of these obligations. The issue will become callable in 1945 at a premium of 3 per cent over par, with the premium reduced in succeeding years. Proceeds will be used to redeem outstanding bonds.

Detroit Edison Co. announced it would file with the Securities and Exchange Commission a registration statement covering issuance of $50,000,000 bonds bearing a 3 per cent coupon. The underwriting syndicate will be headed by Coffin & Burr, Inc. Proceeds will be used to refund current obligations.

Rail Bonds Up As Big Blocks Change Hands

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—Big blocks of the lower priced rails changed hands at advances running to around 4 points in a lively bond market today. Issues in the higher price brackets received a fair share of attention.

Dealers offered several reasons for the brisk rail buying. Freight haulage, as disclosed by carloadings figures, steadily has pointed upward lately, with the gain last week against seasonal expectations.

Another highspot in the day's trade was the fast advance in international telephone loans on heavy turnover. The 5s jumped 2½ to 32½ and the 4½s as much to 30¼.

Others higher included Pere Marquette 4s at 70, Nickel Plate 6s at 93½, Frisco 4½s of '78 at 97½, Studebaker 6s at 105, Delaware & Hudson refunding 4½s at 50, Rock Island General 4s of '88 at 12⅞ and Southern Pacific 4½s of '68.

United States Government issues crowded the year's best prices with gains of as much as 11-32 of a point.

In the foreign dollar list Italy 7s improved fractionally. French stamped 7½s of '41 dropped 4½ and smaller losses appeared for Norway 5s, Uruguay adjusted 3⅜s, Colombia October 6s of '61 and Milan 6½s.

Sales of $10,547,000, face value, compared with $9,927,100.

Auto Production Reported Heavier

Detroit, Dec. 13 (AP).—An increase in car and truck production was reported today by Ward's Reports, Inc., in its weekly survey of activity in automobile factories.

This week's assemblies were estimated at 125,625 motor vehicles. A week ago 124,790 cars and trucks rolled off assembly lines.

Ward's commented that the output is exceptionally high for December and that the present rate of assemblies is making it possible for dealers to catch up on their back orders.

In the comparative week of 1939 a total of 118,405 cars and trucks was constructed.

Listen! with Glynn

A Washington author who's made good in a big way—I guess more that 100,000 copies of your latest book being sold can safely be called something big—is to be a guest on Vest Eales's "Book Lady" program over WJSV at 1 this afternoon.

The author is Mrs. Lella Warren, whose novel "Foundation Stone" was published early this fall. It's a nice fat volume, about the size of that other well known book called "Gone With the Wind," and it deals with an American family history in fine, interesting fashion—which is pretty well attested, too, by the fact that it's on the best seller lists throughout the country.

Mrs. Warren's father was the first head of Washington's Public Health Department when it was founded shortly after the War Between the States. Some of his experiences in post-war Washington have been incorporated in "Foundation Stone."

Over WJSV at 6 tonight, C. B. S.'s weekly "Report to the Nation" is to tell of the work being done by the U. S. Maritime Commission to build up our merchant marine so that once again we shall be mistress of the seas as we were during the last century.

And, speaking of ships, from 11:15 to 11:30 today, WJSV is to bring you a description of the launching of our latest airplane carrier, "Hornet," at Newport News. John Charles Daly will bring you the words.

Contract Bridge

Doubles are dangerous when made against strong declarers, particularly doubles of high contracts where clever planning or a trick play can affect the situation radically. Here is a hand in which defender West was wise in refraining from doubling S. F. at his contract, of six no trump, although it appeared that unfavorable distribution would upset the slam. S. F., who was competing in a championship, managed to circumvent his bad luck by an adroitly developed squeeze play. The bidding, unfortunately, has passed into oblivion, but the cards follow:

NORTH: ♠ A 2 ♡ A K Q J 4 ◇ A K 4 3 ♣ Q 5
WEST: ♠ K J 9 3 ♡ 5 ◇ J 10 9 5 2 ♣ J 8 3
EAST: ♠ Q 8 ♡ 10 9 8 7 6 ◇ 8 ♣ 9 7 6 4 3
SOUTH: ♠ 10 7 6 5 4 ♡ 3 2 ◇ Q 7 6 ♣ A K 10

Six hearts had been foolishly doubled by East, so West chose his singleton heart against the six no-trump bid. Declarer realized he had a cinch for 12 tricks if he could take five heart tricks, but a second lead of the suit disillusioned him on this point.

Quickly he shifted, playing a low spade away from dummy's ace. If he was to develop a squeeze he must give up a trick where it would do him the least harm, at once, not after his long tricks had been played out. East took this trick with the spade eight and returned the spade queen to the ace on the board. Declarer then ran two more hearts and three rounds of clubs, discarding the losing heart four from dummy. On the last club lead West was forced to toss his king of spades, establishing declarer's ten, or part with a diamond, letting dummy win the fourth round of the suit with the four-spot. Either discard would give declarer the twelfth trick. S. F. made six no trump, losing one spade trick.

U.S. Scientists Seek New Metal Sources In Latin America

The newest effort to make countries of the Western Hemisphere independent of foreign sources of war materials was announced Thursday by Secretary of Interior Ickes.

In a statement released at his press conference he said that six scientists of the United States Geological Survey are en route to Bolivia, Cuba and Brazil to explore areas which may furnish tin, tungsten, manganese, chromite and antimony, as well as some other metals essential in the Western Hemisphere defense program.

All of these are listed as either "necessary" or "critical" materials in the production of steel and lightweight alloys for aircraft construction, and most of them have been imported from Far Eastern and European countries. These supplies have either been curtailed or cut off entirely in the present wars.

The scientists are S. R. Capps and W. D. Johnson, jr., who are going to Brazil; C. F. Parks, jr., and T. T. Thayer, who are en route to Cuba; and E. Callaghan and J. F. McAlester, who will visit Bolivia.
